$35,000 Fire Razes Mifflin Inn, Homes

EARLY MORNING BLAZE PERILS ENTIRE VILLAGE

Historic Old Structure East of City and Three Other Buildings Destroyed.

FOUR FAMILIES ROUTED

Spontaneous Combustion Is Blamed for Fire; Traffic Tied Up Two Hours.

A spectacular fire early this morning destroyed historic, century-old Mifflin inn, another restaurant and two residences at Mifflin, seven miles east of Mansfield.

Unofficial estimates placed the loss at $35,000.

The fire for a time threatened the entire business section of the small Ashland county village.

The blaze started in the rear of the two-story frame inn and spread quickly to an adjoining restaurant. Unofficial sources believed spontaneous combustion had started the fire.

Before the volunteer fire corps could reach the blaze, sparks had set two residences on fire, one of them owned by Marshal Sam Whitcomb.

Four families were routed from their homes by the fire and scores of early morning motorists lined the highway as bucket brigades were hastily formed to save houses in the immediate vicinity of the fire.

Traffic over the Lincoln highway was halted for nearly two hours as flames shot hundreds of feet in the air, fanned by a stiff breeze swept across the road.

At least a half dozen residences and three business places including the telephone exchange were threatened at the height of the fire.

Practically all of the village's 200 residents were on the scene. Men, women and children pumped and carried water for the volunteer firemen who manned two hand operated pumps.

Calls to Mansfield, Ashland, Perrysville and Hayesville were made for assistance in fighting the blaze. The Ashland fire department was the only one to respond.

With the community's water system unable to supply enough pressure, wells and cisterns were pumped dry as the firemen laid two hose lines and played water on the adjoining homes.

Besides the inn, a landmark of the pioneer days and for years a

Republicans Confident of November Victory as Convention Opens; Taft Claims New Strength

By LYLE C. WILSON
(UP Staff Correspondent)

CONVENTION HALL, PHILADELPHIA—The Republican national convention convened at 10:43 a. m. (E. S. T.) divided on candidates but patently confident and elected 33-year-old Gov. Harold E. Stassen of Minnesota, as temporary chairman to deliver the party's keynote speech.

Stassen's selection was a bid for the youth vote after eight lean Republican years. He will keynote his party elders at 9:15 (E. S. T.) tonight.

This morning's meeting of prayer, welcoming speeches and song was a strictly routine affair, scarcely related to the turbulent politics raging in the city among representatives of the front running candidates. They generally are recognized now to be District Attorney Thomas E. Dewey, New York, Sen. Robert A. Taft, Ohio, and Wendell L. Willkie, New York utilities executive, in that order of first ballot delegate strength.

The real developments of the convention were going on in the downtown hotels where, as the delegates ran through traditional formalities of the opening session, a stop-Willkie drive took form.

Backbone of the drive was provided by about 100 congressmen. Representing some 20 states, they met and formally demanded that

NAVY READY TO START PROGRAM

Edison Says Preparations Made to Begin Work on Warships.

WASHINGTON —(INS)— Retiring Secretary of the Navy Charles Edison disclosed today that the government is ready to begin actual construction of 68 new warships at an estimated cost of $750,000,000.

At the same time, the navy is engaged in modernizing 29 of its combat ships now in the fleet, according to Edison. He had the statements at a final press conference before leaving Washington.

Edison is retiring from the cabinet today to run for governor of New Jersey.

Edison said the navy is awaiting word of President Roosevelt's signing the 11 per cent naval expansion bill, which was passed by congress Saturday. As soon as the measure is approved by the chief executive, the government is ready to put the new construction program in motion without loss of time, Edison declared.

Included among the 68 ships contemplated are three aircraft carriers; four heavy cruisers; nine light cruisers; 30 destroyers and 22 submarines.

About half of the vessels will be constructed in government yards and the other half by private ship builders.

Edison reported that the navy's system of negotiated contracts with private firms was making it possible to speed up naval ship construction materially.

The modernization of 29 ships currently in active service will strengthen their defense against air attack, Edison indicated.

A general stepping up of employment at government yards was reported by the secretary. In the past three weeks 5,000 additional civilian workers have been hired, he said.

SCHOOLS SOLD

3,000 One-Room Buildings Abandoned in Ohio.

COLUMBUS — (AP) — Summer washdays find the family laundry hanging outside the curtained windows of hundreds of small buildings in which Ohio school children once learned their "three R's."

During the past decade more than 3,000 one-room schools have been abandoned in Ohio, and many have been converted into homes by low income families who purchased them at auction.

Next autumn school bells will find only about 30,000 youngsters on paths to one-room schools compared to nearly four times that number a dozen years earlier. There were 4,528 one-room schools in 1928, Ohio department of education records show. Now there are not quite 1,300.

RALLIES VILLAGE TO FIGHT BLAZE

Operator Sticks to Post, True to Tradition, as Flames, Smoke Swirl About.

By ROBERT E. ROGERS

In a small white frame house lashed by flames that destroyed two business establishments and two residences in Mifflin early this morning was found the heroine of the community disaster.

At her post at the switchboard in the telephone exchange only 75 feet from the roaring inferno, Miss Bess M. Cole put through call after call that resulted in saving several residences in the small Ashland county village, and perhaps saved lives as well.

While the flames, fanned by a stiff breeze, licked at the front of the house where the switchboard is located, Miss Bell, true to the tradition of the service, stuck to her post, roused families and gave the alarm.

When found, she was at the board lighted only by the reflection cast through the window by the flames that shot skyward. The electric lights had failed

BUCHAREST, Rumania—(U.P.)— A munitions dump explosion at Berceni, seven miles from Bucharest, today destroyed more than 200 tons of gun powder and killed a number of workers.

Richland 'Explorers' Off, See Cincy's Sights Today

Two happy Richland county youngsters, William Sweet of Mansfield and Frances Worley of Butler, who left Mansfield Sunday on the "Let's Explore Ohio" trip sponsored by The News-Journal and the Standard Oil company, were scheduled for a busy day of sight-seeing in and around Cincinnati today before going to Chillicothe tonight.

The two Richland county winners in a recent essay contest joined 27 other winners from all part of the state on a 1,000-mile trip over Ohio, the first prize in the contest. Accompanied by six adults, the group will visit scores of the state's points of interest before returning home next Saturday. They are traveling in a chartered bus.

Their schedule today called for a trip to the Miamisburg mound near Dayton, Fort Ancient state park in Warren county, and the Cincinnati Zoo this afternoon. They were to see Serpent Mound in Adams county before going on to Chillicothe to spend the night.

The interesting falls and caves of Hocking county, historical Marietta, and Zanesville with its famous "Y" bridge are on the schedule for Tuesday. The party will be in Zanesville Tuesday night.

Trees Crash as High Wind, Rain Lash Area

Part of Galion in Darkness as Branch Falls Across Power Line; Streets In Crestline Are Flooded.

A severe wind and rainstorm which struck about 7 p. m. Sunday flattened trees in the south part of Mansfield, flooded streets and fields, and left a section of Galion in darkness for several hours.

While heavy rain fell in all sections of Mansfield, the storm caused the most damage in the residential communities south of East First street and east of Main street. Rainfall in the city measured .67 of an inch.

Five of the eight trees on the lawn at the Norman Hammett home, 158 South Foster street, were blown down by the wind, and a number of others were flattened or damaged in the same section.

Trees and branches were blown down at Crestline in a half-hour storm that left streets flooded.

Sharp lightning accompanied the wind and rain. Motorists said it rained so hard in the Mansfield area and south toward Delaware that it was impossible to see.

In western Ohio, lightning struck three homes in Findlay and 1.85 inches of rain fell in 45 minutes. Cincinnati and other southwestern Ohio cities reported heavy damage from wind and lightning.

More showers were forecast for this afternoon and tonight for northern Ohio, with fair and cooler weather due Tuesday.

After several days of cool weather, the temperature went up to 83 degrees Sunday in Mansfield. The low this morning was 66 and by noon the mercury had climbed to 76 degrees.

Order Signing Of Armistice By Delegates

'Cease Firing' Order Scheduled Six Hours After Germans Notified Of Franco-Italian Action Expected Tonight

BULLETIN

ROME — (UP) — France and Italy today signed an armistice ending the conflict which the Italian government entered only two weeks ago.

(By Associated Press)

BORDEAUX—It was announced officially tonight that the French delegates had been ordered to sign the armistice with Italy.

The cabinet met at 5:30 p. m. (11:30 p. m. EST), under President Lebrun and decided to order Gen. Charles Huntzinger, ranking French envoy, to sign with the Italians.

The "cease fire" order is to follow automatically six hours after Italy informs Germany that the French have signed.

It was announced that the cabinet will meet again tomorrow morning.

It was believed that the French-Italian agreement would be formally signed during the night.

Huntzinger then would notify Premier Marshal Petain, after which the official order to suspend fighting would be given.

(By Associated Press)

ROME—French armistice delegates communicated with their government today by telephone preparatory to a decision on the Italian terms, and Fascist leaders reported it probable the final word would come this afternoon.

(In Bordeaux the French cabinet, after a brief session, was reported to have communicated the results of its discussion to the peace emissaries in Rome.)

The Italian high command announced that Mussolini's troops were driving into France from Mont Blanc to the sea "despite strong enemy fortifications in the high mountains and strong enemy resistance, as well as bad weather conditions."

Reading of the Italian terms yesterday in the seventh century Villa Inchesa, 12 miles outside of Rome, required only 20 minutes.

This took place at 7:30 p. m. (12:30 p. m., EST) in an atmosphere quite unlike that which pervaded the Compiegne forest in France last Saturday when the same plenipotentiaries accepted separate terms imposed by Germany.

A company of Carabinieri in war uniforms was drawn up outside the villa when the French arrived, escorted by motorcycle troopers from their suburban villas. The carabinieri saluted.

The French were received by Andrea Geisei Cliesia De Vagliasco, chief ceremonial officer, and other foreign ministry officials. The Italian plenipotentiaries greeted them with the Fascist salute.

All sat down and Foreign Minister Count Galeazzo Ciano announced that Marshal Pietro Badoglio, chief of the army general staff, would deliver the armistice terms by order of Premier Mussolini.

The marshal rose and spoke briefly. Then turning to ATTACK: Italians Advance as French Study Armistice Terms

(By United Press)

ROME—Italian troops smashed into French positions in a general offensive on the Alpine front today as Italy awaited the French government's reply to armistice terms handed French plenipotentiaries at a villa outside Rome last night.

Italy's 13th war communique disclosed that the Italian troops opened an offensive Friday on a 150-mile front between Mont Blanc, near the Swiss frontier, and the French Riviera, and that the attack continued

It was asserted that despite strong French resistance, aided by mountains and atmospheric conditions, the Italians had pushed forward and achieved considerable successes.

France's delegates awaited instructions from the Bordeaux government, to which they had telephoned the Italian terms.

It was arranged that French and Italian plenipotentiaries should meet at a villa as soon as the French had received instructions.

Italians hoped that the French delegates would receive during the day instructions which would permit them to sign. Six hours after Italy has notified Germany of the signature, hostilities are to cease on all French fronts.

"On the Alpine front from Mont Blanc to the sea our troops continued an attack started June 21," the high command communique said. "The formidable defensive positions of the enemy, their strong resistance and bad

REOPEN THE BIDDING

Never be the player whose pass closes the bidding if careful thought indicates that definite action on your part, reopening the bidding, is likely to produce a better score for your side. If the last bidder's call has been passed by his partner, you must weigh the evidence pro and con. This is especially definite, so far as probabilities are concerned, when his bid was the one and only bid yet made. You now know, from his partner's pass, that your own partner has some strength, the main question being how much and where located.

In any such situation, it may be that your partner's chief strength is in the opponent's suit, and he can set it substantially. Your best move usually, therefore, when your own hand is of very close to average strength, is to double. Among advanced players, this cannot deceive your partner into thinking you have a lot of strength, such as you would need to double in a position where the bidding stays open if you pass.

1. ♠ A K 7 4 ♥ Q 5 3 ♦ 8 6 2 ♣ 9 5 2
2. ♠ A 8 7 4 2 ♥ 8 ♦ Q J 6 ♣ K 9 6 3
3. ♠ 9 5 2 ♥ A K 7 6 ♦ Q 7 5 4 ♣ 9 6
4. ♠ A 7 ♥ Q 10 7 ♦ Q J 10 9 6 3 ♣ 6 4
5. ♠ 6 5 ♥ A K 4 ♦ 8 5 ♣ Q 10 9 8 5 3
6. ♠ 5 ♥ A K 4 2 ♦ 8 5 3 ♣ Q 10 9 8 5

If you are East and (A) South bid 1-Diamond, passed by the next two players; (B) South bid 1-Diamond and North replied with 1-Heart, your best action on the above hands would be:

1. (A) Double. Your partner can pass if loaded for diamonds, or bid his suit if not. (B) Pass. Not strong enough for any free bid.
2. (A) Double. (B) Bid 1-Spade, if not vulnerable; pass if vulnerable.
3. (A) Double. (B) Pass.
4. (A) Pass. The foe is in your best suit, and a double would get them out. (B) Pass.
5. (A) Double, and if West answers with 1-Spade, bid 2-Clubs. (B) Bid 2-Clubs.
6. (A) Bid 1-Heart. Doubling dangerous; if West answers with 1-Spade, you must bid 2-Clubs and still haven't shown your other suit. (B) Pass, hoping foe gets into trouble.

Irrigating to Prevent Garden Diseases.

Roses, delphinium, the perennial phloxes, or any other flowering plants whose foliage is subject to mildew, rust or black spot should not be watered by the overhead method. A system of irrigation ditches in the garden for surface watering is one of the best methods of preventing many diseases among plants.

Watering by means of an irrigation ditch can be easily undertaken by making a V-shaped trench behind a row of plants, as shown in the accompanying Garden-Graph. Let water from a hose flow slowly into the trench until the roots have reached a thorough soaking, or several soakings.

After the roots of the plants watered by the irrigation method have been thoroughly soaked with moisture, the soil easily can be replaced in the ditches.

Marriage Meddlers

By ADELE GARRISON

Continuation of "Married Comrades"

"I shall arrange with Leslie," he said, "to have three of his trusted men bring the necklace to a certain rendezvous. Three of our men will accompany Noel and Mary— as Leslie will suppose— to the same rendezvous. I shall acquaint one of our men with the secret markings on the necklace, although there is little chance that Leslie has been able to secure a duplicate of it. After inspection, our men will bring back the necklace with them, while his men start in the other direction with their captives. But they will not get far," he finished grimly, just as Harry flung open the door and rushed in with two figures at whom we all gasped in astonished admiration.

For, at the first cursory glance, it seemed to us, watching, that there were two Marys and two Noels in the room. But as I looked more closely, I saw that while height, weight, figure contours and clothing were correct, there were discrepancies in faces and eyes which told me why Harry Underwood wished to have the real couple and their impersonators in the same room.

Harry swung the door shut and turned the key in the lock.

"That was a near thing," he said. "Katie's head was just appearing above the stair rail, but I'm sure she didn't see us."

"If she did," Lillian said comfortably, "she'll simply think that Noel and Mary were going into the Chief's room with you. It's when you go out of here that you'll have to be careful lest our Katie think she's having hallucinations."

"We'll have to get her into some part of the house whose windows face the other way and keep her there by some ruse until these men are safely away."

My father spoke authoritatively, and Harry Underwood put a quick question.

"How much time have I for this make-up trick?" he asked.

"About an hour," my father answered. "They are to meet Leslie's men at the rendezvous in two hours, and I want you to have plenty of time. It will take about half an hour to drive there."

He looked at us each in turn, and a wintry little smile just touched the corners of his lips.

"You will wonder how I shall know that Leslie himself will not be there," he said. "I think he will not be far away, but not directly on the spot, for I have stipulated that if he or I appear, the arrangement falls through automatically. If he were wholly sane, he would know I would not give Mary or Noel into his hands. But he is crazed enough to believe that I am venal enough to trade them for the emeralds, and he will be waiting in hiding as near as he dares, that he may lose no time in seizing his captives.

"But I think we have overlooked no bets. In the first place, these two men are trained in all sorts of wrestling, including jiu-jitsu. They are also crack shots, and no one at first will think of searching them for weapons. They are wearing light metal link shirts beneath their clothing and bullet proof protection inside their caps.

"In the second place," he went on after a little pause while I, for one, sat thrilled beyond measure at this plan for melodrama, "I have instructed the man impersonating Mary that as soon as they are in the other car, he is to put it out of commission by a method he has perfected, and can accomplish in a second or two if he sits in front, which he will maneuver to do. When they discover the trouble, one of our men will be on his way back with the necklace in an extra car which will trail the first, keeping out of sight, and our other two guards will dash to the aid of our impersonators, who, in the meantime, will keep up their pretense of being helpless prisoners until reinforcements arrive."

French Accept Terms Given by Mussolini

Delegates Ordered to Sign Armistice With Italy; Cease Firing Order Scheduled in Six Hours

Gen. Mario Roatta, army assistant chief of staff, he asked him to read the conditions.

Gen. Charles Huntziger, one of the French delegates, formally acknowledged that he and his companions had taken note of the conditions and would transmit the terms to their government for a decision to be given at the next meeting.

They were then escorted to their automobiles and returned to their villas while Count Ciano sped to Rome to see Mussolini.

The French had arrived yesterday from Munich in three German planes.

Acceptance of the Italian terms—regarded by political circles here as a foregone conclusion—would bring an end to fighting in France six hours after Germany has been notified of the French action.

The nature of the Italian armistice conditions was closely guarded and there was no indication whether a time limit had been set for acceptance.

(In Geneva, Switzerland, Fascist sources said they understood Italy had demanded the right to military occupation of France's entire Mediterranean coast for the duration of the war with England and later a semi-independent buffer state would be formed of Nice, Savoy and part of Dauphine.)

Unlike his axis-partner, Adolf Hitler, who met the French delegates as Compiegne, Premier Mussolini was not present when the mission arrived here last night.

France Left Without Seaport By Italo-German Demands

(By Associated Press)

France in straight-jacketed vassalage—stripped of her coastlines, reduced a land-locked third of her territory, and forced to become a virtual ally of Germany in the impending "battle for Britain"—was the fate reported today by the British government under the terms of the Axis peace.

Fascists said Italy, as her share in the spoils, would demand to occupy all France's Mediterranean coast and later establish a "buffer state" in southern France.

This seizure, coupled with Germany's occupation of France's western seaboard from Dunkerque on the English channel down the Bay of Biscay of Spain, would leave France without a single port.

Official British recognition was withdrawn from the Bordeaux government which accepted the Nazi terms and support was thrown instead to a French national committee, proclaimed in London by Major Gen. Charles De Gaulle, late of the French cabinet.

The German terms as reported by the British government include German occupation of more than half of France, embracing all the rich northern industrial portion and a wide strip covering all the Atlantic coast; internment of the French navy: and dissolution of the French army.

Britai. announced she had received pledges of support from the French colonies of Syria, French Indo-China, the Cameroons, Tunis, Morocco, Jibuti and Senegal.

They will get British financing so they can carry on the fight against Germany, it was said.

A large French army is concentrated in Syria and many units of the French fleet are with the British naval forces at Alexandria, Egypt.

Swiss reports told of large French units fighting through the Alps in the hope of reaching the sea, escaping to Africa and continuing the war.

Britain Made Furious by Hitler Demands Upon French

(By International News Service)

LONDON—With a decimated, conquered France bowed beneath the yoke of harsh Nazi peace demands, an infuriated Britain today stood alone, determined to fight to the end against the mighty military juggernaut of Chancellor Hitler.

While it was not expected that Germany would be overgenerous in her peace terms, Britain today was furious over the demands made by the Nazis upon England's former ally—demands which virtually remove the French nation as an entity in the European picture.

As a result of French acceptance of the German terms, the British immediately broke off relations with the Bordeaux government of France, and instead will recognize a "provisional" French exile government now being organized to carry on the war.

Formation of a "French national committee," was announced by General Charles De Gaulle, undersecretary of war in the former French cabinet of Premier Paul Reynaud, and with this body Britain will carry on the conflict against the Reich.

There was some astonishment in Britain when the Germans demanded only internment of the French fleet, rather than its surrender for use against England.

But the harshness of the armistice terms was such that Britain accused the French government of breach of faith, and the English declared that under the exile "provisional" government, the French colonies were determined to carry on the struggle.

When the terms of the armistice became known in London, the British war cabinet under Prime Minister Winston Churchill met for two and one-half hours to study the details of the German demands.

Disposition of the French colonies and other major territorial considerations were left for decision at a later peace conference, which British quarters believed would be delayed for some time.

atmospheric conditions did not stop our troops. In bold individual actions our soldiers captured some of the enemy positions."

It was asserted that the Italians had taken Fort Chentailler, near Brianon about five miles inside France; Razet, the valley of the Isere river and the Vesubie river.

Italian troops penetrated French lines and at some points were able to attack the French from the rear, it was said. The communique implied that Italians were advancing all along the line and were endangering the entire French front.

It was admitted that Allied planes had raided Palermo, Sicily, and killed 25 persons and wounded 153. Allied planes also raided Massawa, Assab and Diredawa in Italian East Africa.

Italian planes raided Marsa Matruh and Sidi Barrani, in Egypt, and Djibouti, French Somaliland, and Berbera, British Somaliland. The British and French naval bases at Malta and Bizerta were bombed, it was said.

Nazis Continue War In France.

THE FUEHRER'S HEADQUARTERS —(INS)— Capture of additional fortifications of the Maginot line as well as scattered groups of French troops were reported today in an official communique.

The high command reported:

"The Atlantic coast (of France) has been occupied as far as the mouth of the Gironde. Larochelle and Rochefort were taken and we reached an area north of Poitiers. Among the huge and steadily increasing booty we captured a big artillery munitions depot there.

"In Alsace-Lorraine additional scattered enemy groups surrendered. Additional fortifications of the Maginot line also were taken.

"Southeast of Lyon our troops were breaking stubborn resistance and were advancing on Grenoble and Chambery.

"Our speedboats succeeded on the night of June 23-24 in torpedoing and sinking an armed merchantman of 3,500 tons, as well as another steamer of 500 tons, off Dungeness."

Three Mansfielders Hurt In Traffic, 16 Die In State

MAN IN COMA AFTER CAR AND TAXI COLLIDE

Driver Suffers Skull Fracture In Accident; Crawford Youth Killed in Michigan.

Three Mansfielders were injured, one seriously, in traffic accidents Sunday in Richland county, while a Crawford county youth died in a collision at Chelsea, Mich. Traffic mishaps and drowning claimed at least 16 lives in Ohio over the week-end.

Hurled from his car when the machine collided with a taxicab early Sunday at South Franklin avenue and East Second street, William Hayes, 30, of 41 Cleveland avenue, suffered a skull fracture and was still unconscious today in Mansfield General hospital.

Stewart J. Alpin, 348 East Fourth street, the taxi driver, told police that Hayes apparently failed to observe the stop sign at the intersection. Hayes was driving east on Second street, while Alpin was driving south on Franklin.

Natale Chillemi and his wife, Rose, of 125 Reba avenue, were injured about 7 p. m. Sunday in a three-car crash on route 42 on the Ashland hill. Both are in General hospital. Chillemi suffered a fractured arm and Mrs. Chillemi received head lacerations. Their son, Michael, 17, riding with them, was not hurt.

State highway patrolmen arrested Robert E. Rush, 25, of Pavonia, driver of one of the three cars, on a charge of driving while under the influence of alcohol. The officers said Rush's car collided with the one driven by Chillemi and then crashed into a taxicab operated by Harry C. Simpson, 26 North Adams street. Neither Rush nor Simpson was injured.

Norris Earl Stinchelfer, 19, North Robinson, Crawford county, was fatally injured in an automobile crash Sunday at Chelsea, Mich., where he had been employed since last October.

Private funeral services for the Stinchelfer youth will be held at 1:30 p. m. Wednesday at his parents' home in North Robinson and later in the United Brethren church. Rev. L. D. Reynolds will officiate. Burial will be in Whetstone cemetery.

Surviving are the parents, Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Stinehelfer; three brothers, Myron of Bucyrus; Rev. James Stinehelfer of Lima, and Ralph, jr., of North Robinson, and two sisters, Mrs. James Rudd, Chelsea, Mich., and Miss Donna M. Stinehelfer, North Robinson.

Philip Cohen, 67, of Galion suffered arm, leg and back injuries when he was struck by an automobile at a Galion street intersection. His condition is not believed serious.

At Fremont, Mary Lou Overmyer, 8, died from injuries suffered in a traffic accident. Four boys were drowned in the Ohio river, seven miles south of Martins Ferry when their rowboat capsized.

Mansfielder Gets Second Term as Epworth Leader

SHELBY — Wade Pittenger of Mansfield was re-elected president of the Richland County Epworth League cabinet Sunday afternoon during the annual business session of the county Methodist leagues held as part of the Lakeside "pep" rally at First Methodist church here.

Other officers named were Miss Audra Taylor of Butler, vice president; Miss Lucile Fox of Ontario, chairman of devotional life; John Dickey of Pavonia, chairman of missions; Miss Neva Clingen of Franklin, chairman of social service; Miss Rhea Downs of Ontario, chairman of recreation and culture; John Gray of Shelby, chairman of institutes and camps; Rev. E. G. Corwin of First Methodist church, Mansfield, councilor; and Parker Long of Mansfield, secretary-treasurer.

The new officers were installed at an impressive service in the evening by Rev. Avery Butler of Butler, president of the Mansfield District Epworth league cabinet.

The rally was opened with a song service led by Rev. Butler. A short address on the work done by the Lakeside Institute was given by Rev. Arthur Staples, pastor of the host church. A recreational program in charge of Miss Downs, county recreational chairman; and a playlet by leaguers from First Methodist church, Mansfield, was part of the afternoon session.

Assisting with entertainment arrangements for the meeting were John Gray, general chairman; Mrs. Eileen Tomlinson, chairman of food committee; the Misses Elsie Boor and Virginia Swisher, registration committee; and the Misses Marjorie Keck, Rebecca Bond, Carolyn Bond, Marjorie Knapp and Eileen Corwin, Edwin Dick, Henry Cline, Mervin Tomlinson and Edgar Lewis, members of the various committees.

Up and Down THE STREET

Parents of Mansfield boys who are at Boys State in Columbus may get a little shock to learn from their sons that they are now "married." The "ceremonies" took place yesterday, with some of the boys enacting the roles of brides. The idea behind it was to figure out their "income taxes," which would be much lower for married men than for single ones. The boys fill out the returns and make "payments" with the official "money" of the Boys State.

A young doe scampering about in the vicinity of Linden road and Park avenue west caused no little excitement this morning among residents in that vicinity. The animal, one of several reported seen in and near Mansfield in the past few months, was seen over a period of more than an hour. Leon Gilbert, 53 Brickman avenue, reported seeing the doe lying in a thicket at about 7:30 a. m. Miss Helen Thomas, Chester avenue, said she saw the animal about 8:30 a. m., trying to get over a fence to get into the C. K. King property on Park avenue west road. She said it failed and then ran west along the edge of the road.

AIR-CONDITION CONFUSION AT CONVENTION IN PHILADELPHIA

By WALTER KIERAN
(INS Staff Correspondent)

PHILADELPHIA — The Philadelphia scrapple of the century opened today in air-conditioned confusion. Local Democrats were evacuated to the hills as the dark horse brigade raced through the valleys and alleys trying to bag delegates with hot air guns.

Late news from the smoke-filled rooms was that Taft, Dewey, Willkie, Vandenberg, James, Bridges, Hoover and a guy named Pete, address unknown, will each be elected on the first ballot.

James, Taft, Willkie, Bridges and Gannett all have headquarters at the Hotel Benjamin Franklin so the management put a sign out front which reads "Welcome Chicago Cubs."

The hotel is neutral against everybody except "Gabby" Hartnett who is not running this year.

The Willkie people took over an old Child's resturant for a rallying point and a volunteer barker yodels: "This way for wheat cakes and Willkie, folks!"

Candidate Dewey is after the trailer vote with a seven passenger sleeper van borrowed from R. M. Hollingshead, a Camden, N. J., manufacturer. Dewey hasn't ridden in it since he's been here but it's nice to know he can get home if he loses his railroad ticket on a sure thing.

Candidate Willkie receives visitors in the early Roman manner. Seeing they won't let him sleep between the sheets, he sprawls on his bed, waking up at five second intervals to shake hands with another visitor.

TAKES SHORT RECESS FOR CONVENTION

Boost in Navy Tonnage and Expansion of Army Await Action.

(By United Press)

WASHINGTON — Congress, which began an "economy" session last January, was in recess today after voting the largest peace-time appropriations in history.

Nothing was scheduled for this week in either the house or the senate to allow Republican members to attend their presidential nominating convention in Philadelphia.

Although all of President Roosevelt's urgent defense program was completed before the recess was taken Saturday night, several major items remain for final action when congress reconvenes July 1. Most important of these are:

1. The request for a 75 per cent increase in the authorized tonnage of the navy. This program, estimated to cost $4,000,000,000 and designed to give the United States a two-ocean navy, was approved by the house Saturday and will be taken up by the senate next week.

2. President Roosevelt's proposed plan for compulsory government service training for all youths. It has not been presented to congress yet, but the president has announced that he would make the request sometime in July.

3. Additional requests for huge authorizations for defense. The army is known to be preparing an additional expansion program to match the $4,000,000,000 naval expansion. The army's program will include, it was understood, a request for $1,000,000,000 for building new factories and supplying new equipment for existing ones to build equipment and ammunition for the defense program.

It was an entirely different note on which congress recessed Saturday, compared with that on which this session began in January. Six months ago the emphasis was on economy, cutting expenditures to avoid increasing the national debt limit, and limiting regular appropriations to a minimum to avoid the issue of additional taxes in this election year.

But when the gavels pounded out the recess the two houses had voted an additional $1,00,000,000 of new taxes annually, increased the debt limit $4,000,000,000 to $49,000,000,000, and appropriated more than $10,000,000,000 for the coming fiscal year, including more than $5,000,000,000 for defense — an increase of $3,000,000,000 over January defense estimates.

DEADLINE NEAR

CCC Applications to Be Taken Only Until July 2.

Richland county youths wishing to enter Civilian Conservation Corps service were urged today to make applications quickly to Mrs. Agatha Leonard at the relief office.

July 2 has been set as the deadline for county enrollments, Mrs. Leonard said, and there are still a number of vacancies in the Richland quota.

Fourteen young men are scheduled to leave for camp July 13, but as yet only six have made application. Birth certificates, social security and employment office cards must be presented with applications which will be taken at the relief office any morning except next Saturday and Monday.

FORMER BUTLER RESIDENT DIES

Miss Pearl Walker Succumbs At Home In Chicago.

The body will arrive in Butler Tuesday morning and funeral services will be held at 2:30 p. m. Tuesday at the Bunker Hill church with Rev. Lena Jennings of Perrysville officiating. Burial will be in Bellville cemetery.

ATTACK FATAL

Dr. Cecil Jones Stricken by Heart Ailment In California.

Word has been received here of the death of Dr. Cecil Jones, 38, who was well known in Richland county, at his home in Los Angeles, Calif.

Dr. Jones, who was a son of Rev. J. B. Jones, former financial secretary of the Worthington Methodist Children's home, died following a heart attack. He was a physician in Beverley Hills, near Los Angeles. His wife and two small daughters survive.

The Voice of BROADWAY

—By DOROTHY KILGALLEN

Speaking for Myself.

Nothing amuses me more than the jealousy with which the Hollywood citizens regard my favorite Broadway expatriate, Orson Welles. From the day he landed in Burbank (dressed, I believe, in a black flowing cloak) he has been disliked by as close to 100 per cent of the professional population as has ever been united in envy against one person.

They are jealous of him, as nearly as I can make out, because first of all, he's an authentic boy genius. In Hollywood, all the "boy genius" producers are 42, and call themselves 32. Then no one ever put over such I-Can-Do-Everything-Just-as-I-Please contract as Orson got.

The final blow was his beard. Nobody in Hollywood, except Peter the Hermit, who was never candidate for an Academy award, had ever thought of wearing an off-screen beard. It made Orson a standout target for autograph hunters. It made him one of a kind in a town where there are three of everything. And the glamour boys and girls just couldn't stand it.

But I don't imagine Orson is awfully worried about not having made Hollywood friends. He'd much rather have all the important enemies.

I wonder if students of English don't get discouraged when they read about fellows like Maxie Rosenbloom and Jimmy Durante who make all their money murdering the language. . . . The scene from the north terrace of the Courtenay club is one of the five best views in Manhattan.

I'd adore having an electrical transcription of a conversation between Elsa Maxwell and George Jean Nathan. . . . Or Ethel Merman and Kirsten Flagstad. . . . Cowboys never seemed very glamorous to me; my heart never fluttered faster because of anything I ever saw in the old corral, unless it was a pony.

But I love those newsreel shots of cowhands riding bronchos, and when I lived in Laramie, Wyo., I used to adore the annual rodeo, when all the Indians came to town wearing pink shirts that they never tucked in. . . . I can't sleep—or even sit for very long—in a room where a clock is ticking.

No wonder pigeons are credited with such clever remarks. Aren't they always hanging around libraries? . . . "American Jubilee" at the World's Fair is a thrilling show, but I could do without that tiresome clown pantomime.

It must be difficult for French performers in this town to be gay in these times, but they seem to be going on bravely: Irene Bordini in "Louisiana Purchase." Sylvie St. Clair at Le Ruban Bleu and Mimi at the Gaucho, are all singing like Pagliacci larks. . . . Whenever I see a trailer of Bob Hope in a who dunit picture, I can't wait to come back and put my money through the box-office window.

The big problem of a girl's life these days is air-conditioning. You start out of an evening, and the sidewalks are still simmering from the day's heat, so you don't wear a coat. You get to the theater, and if it's legitimate, it's usually stuffy, so you swelter. Then you go to the Stork club, and freeze in the breeze, and wish to heaven Tommy Manville would come along with an old piece of ermine.

I always felt a bored annoyance with amateur pictures taken until a couple of months ago somebody put a color-film movie camera in my hands. Now I'm a parlor Capra. . . . I'd love to see a conga line composed of John L. Lewis, Alexander Woollcott, Charles Laughton, May Robson and Gypsy Rose Lee.

My idea of the greatest example of modern courage is demonstrated by celebrities who guest-star on "Information Please." . . . I wish the Broadway association would ban sidewalk photographers, street hawkers and those dreadful souvenir stands that cater to the World's Fair out-of-towners, but make the boulevard look so cheap.

I think hill-billy songs are a menace to civilization. . . . Three best shows in town for the summer are: "There Shall Be No Night," "Life With Father" and "The Man Who Came to Dinner." If you just want to hear some songs and look at some pretty girls see "Louisiana Purchase" and "Du Barry Was a Lady."

I wonder if George Arliss or Eric von Stroheim ever went out incognito, wearing a dark monacle?

I'll bet if a candid camera photographer sneaked 20 full length action shots on any debutante on the current list, and showed them to her, she'd start walking with a book on her head tomorrow.

Out-door dining is very gay sometimes, just as riding through the park in a horse-drawn carriage is, but most of the time I'm more in the mood for indoor candlelight and a nice cozy taxi. . . . Airlines ought to hire professional smilers to sit in those big cars that carry passengers from ticket offices to the flying fields—the people en route to La-Guardia field always look so gloomy.

I've never been in a canoe. . . . The picture titled "Safari" is enough to send the audience on one. . . . Leonello's is my idea of a perfect restaurant for average folk—wonderful food, inexpensive menu, spic-and-span atmosphere; I hope the chic folk from the El Morocco set don't cross the tracks and make it a soignee bistro.

Hollywood Speaks---

Here's a picture for that evening when you can't stand it any more—war talk, worry, or whatever has you down — and you want to get away from things for a scare-and-laugh spree.

If you found "The Cat and the Canary" diverting, this one is of the same pattern, only more so. (If you didn't care for the first Hope-Goddard mystery comedy, then stay home and mope!)

As in their first film, the comedy talents of Hope, once less appreciated than at present, are allowed to sparkle in a setting that includes the able and decorative presence of shapely Paulette, once again the heiress to a haunted house. The haunted precinct this time is a Cuban castle—complete with sliding panels and doors, secret halls, fluttering bats, and a potent pipe organ. Undertaking to clear the place of its assorted ghosts, Hope is equipped with a valet (Best) who is not fond of ghosts, which—like much of the material here—is no great departure from formula.

"Earthbound." Screenplay by John Howard Lawson and Samuel G. Engel. Directed by Irving Pichel. Principals: Warner Baxter, Andrea Leeds, Lynn Bari, Charley Grapewin, Henry Wilcoxin, Elizabeth Patterson, Russell Hicks, Christian Rub, Ian Wolfe, Reginald Sheffield, Pedro de Cordoba.

For some reason the dead on the screen lately have been having a tough time breaking away from mortal surroundings. This story in its silent version preceded by years the recent "Topper" comedies, the rambling "Beyond Tomorrow," and the most excellent of them all, "Rebecca."

The new "Earthbound" finds Baxter as the shade of a murdered man whose sudden passing left such a mess of human affairs behind that he stuck around to straighten things out before applying for his wings. It's his problem to persuade his murderess (Barii) to confess and save her (husband (Wilcoxin) who has taken the blame. With the aid of a mysterious old gentleman (Grapewin) who alone is able to converse with the ghost, and after some powerful straining to "break through" the barrier restraining him from the living, the hero attains his end.

"Earthbound" is off the routine track, a curious and often powerful piece, and not too somber.

Tribe Divides Double Header; Reds Triumph

Cincy Beats Giants Twice To Take National Loop Lead Again.

BOSTON—(AP)—It's news every day who's leading the National league and today it's the Cincinnati Reds again.

Whether the fact holds for tomorrow depends on the Boston Bees, who have made the going tough for the Reds this year, winning three of their seven games.

Whitey Moore, making his second start of the season, is Manager Bill McKechnie's hope to stop this revolving door business. Dick Errickson, who has beaten the Reds twice, tries again for the Bees.

The Reds' Sunday double win, 7 to 4 and 2 to 0, over the New York Giants before 52,000 in the Polo Grounds bounced Cincinnati back to the top for the sixth time this year.

The first game looked lost to the Reds, with two out in the ninth, old Carl Hubbel pitching steadily, and the Giants leading, 4 to 2. Harry Craft and Mike McCormick were on base and Bill Hershberger, swinging for Milburn Shoffner, sent the ball to centerfield. Bob Seeds let it get around him and Bill had a triple to tie the score.

Bill Werber drew a walk and Morrie Arnovich, Lonnie Frey, and Frank McCormick singled to wrap the game up. Joe Beggs kept the Giants in hand in their half to give Shoffner his first victory for the Reds. Milburn went in in the seventh when Bucky Walters, upset because one of his fast ones had beaned Bill Jurges, gave the Giants two runs.

* * *

The nightcap was one of Gene Thompson's highly acceptable jobs and his ninth victory. He gave the Giants three singles, allowed two men as far as third base, and struck out five. In the fourth Frank McCormick tripled and scored on Hershberger's fly for all the lead Gene needed. A single by Mike McCormick, an infield out, and another single by Arnovich produced the final run in the fifth.

He was disqualified for starting too soon.

Ontarios Lose NCO Tussle

Galion Scores 15 to 7 Win At Ontario.

The ability to hit when they needed it, gave the Galion pennant chasers a 15 to 7 victory over the Ontario club in an N. C. O. league tussle yesterday at Ontario.

Although both teams wound up with an 11-hit total, the home run hitting of Artieg, Galion left-fielder, and the three-bagger of F. Burgaff with men on bases proved more than enough to outpoint the Ontario club.

* * *

Jumping into the lead with two runs in the first inning, it looked like the Ontarios would have an easy time of it, but an eight-run rally in the eighth by the Galion club put an end to their hopes.

Patterson was on the mound for the Ontario outfit, while Lamb toed the rubber for the Galionites.

In the other N. C. O. league game yesterday, the Liberty Park nine suffered their second straight defeat, with Little Sandusky handing them an 8 to 3 licking.

Tied at the end of the seventh inning at three all, the Little Sandusky outfit staged five-run rally in the eighth frame to clinch the contest. Beer was on the mound for the Liberty park club, while Culver toed the rubber for the Little Sandusky team.

Wes Griffin, manager of the Indianapolis baseball club, whose life the past two weeks has been something less than a rose-strewn path, hopes the worst is over.

The Indianapolis skipper had cause to rejoice yesterday when his Indians won their first ball game in two weeks—the opener of a double-header with Minneapolis.

Two weeks ago Sunday the Indians were in third place. In the interval they lost 12 straight games and dropped into seventh place.

Southpaw Bob Logan broke the Indians' losing streak when he held the Millers to six hits for a 6 to 3 victory. Mickey Haefner was in complete command as the second place Millers evened the day's score by winning the second contest, 6 to 1.

Toledo pulled up within a half game of Indianapolis by trimming Milwaukee, 6 to 3, in the first tilt of a scheduled doubleh ill. The second game was rained out.

Louisville lost a good opportunity to move into third place ahead of Columbus, but could do no better than break even with St. Paul, 6-4 and 9-0.

Columbus' doubleheader against league leading Kansas City was rained out.

Mansfielder Annexes First Major Crown

Thelma Chalks Up Rounds of 84's to Top Field of 36 Players At Akron.

THELMA LINSTER today had in her possession a trophy symbolic of the Ohio Women's Public Links golf championship.

Performing like a veteran, Thelma, in winning her first major tournament, topped her nearest opponent by 14 strokes as she toured the Hillcrest Country club at Akron with a pair of spectacular 84's.

Holder of the Possum Run title for the past four years, and rated as one of the top-notch shotmakers in north central Ohio, Thelma hopped into the lead in the early rounds of the annual classic and never trailed.

She played the first 18 holes Saturday and enjoyed a seven-stroke advantage over the field of 36 players

The Possum Run champion beat out Mrs. M. M. Wolfe of Youngstown, who finished second with 180, while Olive Hinkle, Akron champion, came in to take third place with a 184 total.

Thelma finished with a 168, which was 24 strokes over women's par. This marks Thelma's 11th year in competition and the third time she has participated in the Ohio event.

Joe Mayer paced the Possum Run entry in the Ohio Public Links tournament held on the Firestone course at Akron over the week-end.

Running into trouble with his putter, Mayer registered an even 300 total to finish in fourth place. His total earned him a place in the Ohio amateur tourney Wednesday through Saturday at Cleveland.

Al Kushin, another Mansfielder, carried off a share of the honors by marking up the only hole-in-one collected in the tournament.

Kushin accomplished his feat during the Sunday round when he sent his tee shot straight to the cup on the short No. 8 hole

Kushin came in with a 302 to share fifth-place honors with Henry Pabian of Steubenville.

Byron Hunt of Columbus won the men's event in a nine-hole playoff against Bill Santor of Canton. Both finished the tourney with 297's and Hunt copped the title when Santor missed a six-foot putt on the ninth hole of the playoff.

* * *

Mayer, who had 151 Saturday, turned in rounds of 72-77. Kushin had a 153 and added scores of 69 and 80.

Nose Out Lincoln Heights By Rallying in 10th.

A two run rally in the tenth inning by the Isaly Dairymen put an end to an extra inning slugfest staged by the Isaly and the Lincoln Heights softball clubs at Tappan field yesterday.

The final score was Isalys 12, Lincoln Heights 11. Christman was on the mound for the winners, while Dinger toed the rubber for the Heightsmen.

* * *

Feature of the slugfest was the home run hitting of Wilkins, Heights' third baseman, Harner Isaly centerfielder, and Prosser, Isaly leftfielder. Each delivered a circuit smash.

SPORTS PARADE

By HENRY McLEMORE

NEW YORK — (UP) — We took Frank Buck to Aqueduct and were scarcely able to bring him back alive.

* * *

The man who has faced jungle dangers in Belgian Congo, Sumatra, Borneo, and the Malay peninsula trembled like a child when confronted with the hazards and pitfalls of Aqueduct.

* * *

It was his first visit to a race track and he ventured there with complete confidence.

He scorned our warnings of the perils that awaited him.

"Bring on those pari-mutuels," Buck boasted. "Are they more vicious than the maddened sladang? Do you mean to tell me that the common domesticated horse, which may be approached without the aid of native beaters and gun bearers, is capable of harming a man?"

Vainly we tried to advise him. We told him of the touts, whose sting is worse than that of the hooded cobra. We pleaded with him not to take lightly the dangers of the photo-finish.

But he laughed. He still was laughing as he tossed off a Singapore gin sling at the clubhouse bar and played Fishwife across the board in the first race. He didn't even watch the race that brought him in $10.50 for his $6 investment.

"Too tame," Buck said. "Like shooting monkeys. Give me something a little tougher in the second race."

So he took Dicty Step in the next one, a 22 to 1 shot.

Stanley found Livingstone, but he never could have found Dicty Step at the finish of the race. Somewhere in the brush of the brackstretch he stopped as if pierced by a poisoned dart, and Buck gave the low wail of the bongo-pango when that animal is caught in a trap.

The Aqueduct safari from here on out became a nightmare and the dauntless Buck must have wished he were comfortably beating his way between Upper Zambezi and Lower Zambezi.

Back in New York, in his trophy room and surrounded by the heads of wild animals he had shot, Buck pointed to a vacant place on the wall.

* * *

"See that spot?" he asked, pointing to a space between the heads of a jaguar and a panther. I wanted what I believed to be the meanest thing alive to hang up there. Now I've changed by mind about the most dangerous of all animals—a race horse who doesn't get a call."

BILLY JURGENS 3RD BEAN BALL VICTIM IN MAJORS

NEW YORK — (NS) — The third "bean ball" victim in the major leagues this season, Billy Jurges, New York Giants' shortstop, was resting easily in Polyclinic hospital today with a severe brain concussion.

Jurges was "beaned" by a pitch which slipped as it left the hand of Bucky Walters, ace Cincinnati Reds hurler, in the seventh inning of the first game of yesterday's double-header. Jurges, who never lost consciousness, readily accepted Walters' explanation that the incident was purely accidental and entirely unintentional.

Joe Louis Predicts Baer Will K. O. Galento in 10 Rounds

By PAT ROBINSON

NEW YORK — (NS) — Here's a tip straight from the feed box: — Max Baer will knock out Tony Galento in Jersey City a week from tomorrow night.

Who says so? Joe Louis. And Joe should know what both those birds can do for he's had the pleasure of flattening both of them.

Not only that, but Joe whispered to the writer that he has bet a few coarse green notes that Max will stop the rolling beer barrel in less than 10 heats.

Moreover, just to make his "sure thing" doubly sure, Joe took the trouble to visit Max's camp to tell the great actor how to do it.

Joe likes Max almost as much as he dislikes Tony and he'll get just as much pleasure watching Max flatten Tony as if he were doing it himself.

"Don't try to stiffen him in the first round," Joe cautioned Max who, for once in his life, listened with serious attention. "That fat boy's too strong to go out in a hurry.

* * *

"Just stab him like this for a few rounds and cut him up and whenever you see an opening shoot a right cross. Make sure you tie him up in the clinches like this (and Joe demonstrated) and watch out for his head. If you ain't careful he's liable to butt your head off your shoulders

"If you do just like I says you're sure to stop him."

Injuries May Have Serious Effect on Pennant Races

By BILL WHITE
(AP Sports Writer)

THE ARGUMENT of whether a player should dress up like one of King Arthur's armor-plated knights before stepping onto the diamond is due for its annual airing.

The cobwebs had hardly cleared from Dodger Ducky Medwick's brain after being beaned by Bob Bowman of the Cards Tuesday, when Billy Jurges of the Giants was hoffed yesterday by Bucky Walters of the Cincinnati staff, and Ted Williams, lanky Boston Red Sox outfielder, also suffered a concussion when he and Roger Cramer collided while pursuing a fly ball.

So the "alarmists" will be pressing soon for the cameramen in all sorts of odd contraptions designed to save America's players from a fate that could be best avoided by either ducking or looking where they're going.

But make no mistake, the injuries will have serious consequences. The Giants, right in the thick of the National league pennant fight, dropped a pair to the Reds yesterday by 7-4 and 2-0 and that dropped them back to third place while the Reds were remounting the throne for the sixth time.

The Red Sox will miss Williams. They lost the first game of yesterday's double bill against Cleveland, in which Ted was hurt and Cramer badly shaken up, by 4-1 as Al Smith spun a six hitter. They might have lost the second if it hadn't been for the home run hitting of Jim Tabor whose two blows gave them a 2-0 victory.

Medwick, whose "beaning" last Tuesday started all this fuss, came back as a regular and helped the Dodgers climb back into second place. His two timely singles kept the Pittsburgh Pirates from making off with a 13-inning afterpiece, after they managed an 8-5 win in the first game. The second game was called because of darkness with the score tied, 4-4.

Other National league doings included fine performances by two rookie Chicago Cub pitchers—Jake Mooty and Ken Raffensberger. Jake won the first game from the Phillies by 3-2 on a six hit job and Ken took the second 7-2.

Manuel Salvo and Joe Sullivan likewise came through a twin assignment for the Boston Bees, handing the St. Louis Cardinals their first double beating under Manager Billy Southworth by scores of 7-5 and 10-5. Salvo pitched a six hitter and Sullivan an eight hitter.

Bob Bowman who beaned Medwick was spiked in the first inning of the first game by Sebastian Subra of the Bees, and forced to retire.

In the American league Buck Newsom won his ninth game as the Detroit Tigers defeated Washington 4-2 and a ball of lagniappe, trimming Cleveland by socking the Yankees 9-2, allowing them only four hits.

The Washington Senators and the St. Louis Browns split a rain-dampened double bill, the Nats winning the first 12-5 and losing the nightcap 3-2.

The Philadelphia-Chicago doubleheader was postponed by rain.

NEW YORK —(AP)— Mrs. Tot Pressnel and Mrs. Tex Carleton, wives of the Dodger pitchers, are next door neighbors in a Brooklyn hospital. . . . Forgotten man: While the former ring champs were being introduced from the ring Thursday night, Tony Canzoneri, one of the greatest of the ex's, sat in the 12th row, alone and unnoticed.

If the White Sox don't get Ted Williams' goat, the Browns will. Manager Fred Haney sings the "My Hero" song from "The Chocolate Soldier" every time Ted goes to bat.

TODAY'S GUEST STAR.

Nixson Denton, Cincinnati Times-Star: "Mr. Medwick's head has lived up to the finest diamond traditions. . . . Reports that it was dented by a pitched ball have proved to be erroneous."

When Arturo Godoy left his apartment for the Yankee Stadium the other night, Mrs. Godoy went to a nearby church and for two hours prayed Arturo would come home the winner. . . . Most folks have been calling Harry Danning the last of M'Graw's Giants. Bill Terry says that's wrong—it's Hal Schumacher.

L'AFFAIRE HAMLIN.

Brooklyn gossips say the other Dodgers are glad to see Luke Hamlin get spanked by MacPhail and they hope he'll come back a better pitcher. . . . One Dodger said: "They call him home run Hamlin—we call him run home Hamlin."

Some of the niftiest fight pictures we ever saw came out of the Louis-Godoy scrap. . . . Goodness knows, Dempsey vs. a wrestler is bad enough but when Tom Vacks, a St. Louis promoter, talks about putting Dempsey on there with old Jess Willard again, somebody ought to call the cops.

Stoney McGlynn predicts in the Milwaukee Sentinel the Green Bay Packers, with their best team yet, will be undefeated in pro football competition this year. . . .

BUT THAT'S ENOUGH.

One of the crack big time wrestlers has just been admitted to the Michigan State pen. . . . The prison paper doesn't give his name or the nature of his offense except that he wrestled Jim Londos 11 times and Gus Sonnenberg 16.

Cabbies Score Twin Victory

Outpoint Galion Club, 8 to 1, 7 to 2, Yesterday.

Top notch pitching by Fisher and Smollen, coupled with the home run hitting of Botzer and Carver, made it easy for the Safety Cabs to take both ends of a double-header from the Thompson's Service station softball club at Liberty park diamond yesterday.

Fisher allowed the Galion club only three hits in the first game, while Smollen set down the same outfit with only one hit in the second tilt. Score of the first game was, Safety Cabs 8, Galion 1, and the result of the second was 7 to 2, with the Cabbies coming out on the winning end.

* * *

Boltzer and Carver collected a home run apiece in the final game. Four of the Safety Cabs' nine hits in the first contest were triples.

McClurg hurled for Galion in the first game, while Walker took over mound duties in the second.

ENLARGE BOYS' QUARTERS AT 'Y'

House Committee Fixing Over Facilities to Make More Room for Activities.

A program of redecorating and remodeling in the boys' game room at the Y. M. C. A. is under way this week.

Due to the large number of boys taking part in activities there it has been found necessary to enlarge the boys' quarters, according to Ray Calene, chairman of the "Y" house committee.

To make additional room, a small room in the boys' department, on the west side of the building, is being torn down, making one large room extending from one end of the building to the other.

The room will also be redecorated and new lighting fixtures installed, it was announced. The room will be used for table tennis, checkers and chess playing, and will be ready for use within the next two weeks.

ARMY OFFICER HITS CONDITION OF FLYING FIELD

Jose Puts Check on Hopes For Additional U. S. Funds For Student Training.

Major E. H. Jose of Chicago, one of the Civil Aeronautics Authority's head men was in Mansfield the past week and had some pretty critical things to say concerning the municipal airport where the government is training a class of civilian pilots.

Flying here from the Windy City, the major got his first look at the field and his remarks to James R. Harrington, airport manager, would hardly look well in print.

What he did have to say was that Mansfield will not receive any government funds for advanced pilot training until some improvements are made to develop the airfield. That means the CPT students will get no additional training beyond 35 hours for their private license.

Major Jose, an army air corps man of long standing, told airport attaches flatly that Mansfield couldn't expect the government to spend money here until the city showed some initiative itself and improved the grounds.

During his two-hour stay the major advocated the lengthening and improvement of the present runways.

He stated that the field was ample size and all that was needed was a little work, including the sodding and rolling of the runways. He also said that the field should be levelled and several "humps" removed, along with several trees and bushes that clutter the port.

About the worst blow to Mansfield airmen was Jose's assertion that had he known the condition of the airport previously, the civilian pilot training program would not have been granted to the city.

He said that the additional students would, however, be granted because the additional trainees had been promised by the government.

He added, however, that no future expansion of civilian or military training in Mansfield could be expected until the field was put in better shape.

Jose confided to this column that hangar and airplane equipment was in first class shape and that the instructor (Harrington) was rated "one of the best" in the state. Criticizing the city for failing to "get behind" its airport, he asserted that he had confidence in equipment here and that the student pilots under instructions were rated "above the average."

And as the city learned that its airport isn't all that it should be word comes from Ashland that a group of businessmen there is advocating a municipal airport for that city.

Realizing the importance of airport facilities, a group of Ashlanders met several nights ago and proposed to purchase the present field and develop it with the construction of concrete runways, hangars and an administration building.

One Ashlander told the group that he would spend "considerable" of his own funds to see the improvement through.

The group is actively engaged in drafting the project and it is expected that some proposition will be made to the city in the near future concerning the expansion with private funds.

So important was the news of the Ashland meeting to Mansfield flying enthusiasts that they are calling for a "war council" with city officials and business interests, probably this week.

They point out that such a development in Ashland would point the way for airline and air express stop there with the result that the Mansfield airport would then be "just another cow pasture."

Mansfield National Aeronautical association officials who were instrumental in getting the government to establish one of the civilian pilot training centers here will launch a concerted drive for city packing for the improvement of the field.

Jose in mentioning the improvement pointed out that the government is now furnishing up to 75 per cent towards airport developments where cities can finance part of the cost.

Seven of the 10 CPT students, all of which have some seven or eight hours of dual instruction were taken aloft for practice in recovery from spins and stalls yesterday.

All but three of the students had their half-hour session in the air under Harrington's guidance when a squall struck the city, grounding all ships for the rest of the day.

Harrington says that two of the students will be ready to solo within the next week, and all will go aloft alone for the first time within the next two weeks.

These four Mansfield girls will be seen in a ballet intime, "Tales of Vienna Woods" in the annual revue of the Hogan Dance Studio which will be presented at the Madison theater at 8:15 p. m. Tuesday. HOGAN DANCE STUDENTS GIVE THEIR ANNUAL REVUE TUESDAY

The revue of the Hogan Dance Studio, which is something of an institution in Mansfield because it has been presented every year for 16 years, will be staged at 8:15 p. m. tomorrow at the Madison theater. In charge of production is Mrs. Clara Hogan, director of the studio.

There will be a number of unusual dance presentations, among them a ballet intime "Tales of Vienna Woods," with the dancers in pastel costumes. The big ballet will be "Pipes O' Pan," written by Frederick Knight Logan. There will be 40 dancers including the half-god Pan, the shepherd and his love, nymphs, elves and peasant children, all appropriately costumed.

In the "Blackbird Fantasy," danced by Norma Jane Howell, her entire costume will be of black feathers. Patty Metcalf will be seen in an acrobatic dance with a beach ball.

Three small couples will give an exhibition waltz number, the "men" in summer formals and the "ladies" in formal evening gowns. All about ten years of age, they are Doris Berno, Roanne Farry, Georgia Anne McClelland, Tommy McNew, Jackie Dickson and Robert Shively.

Martha Metcalf, who is an instructor at the school, will do a toe dance, "Valse Brilliante," and there will be other teams, groups and solos.

Dale Stevens' orchestra will play for the revue. Assisting Mrs. Hogan in staging the show are Miss Metcalf, Miss June Ford, and Miss Helen Martin, Columbus, who is also an instructor at the school.

2 Mansfielders Finish Training On Navy Cruise

Two Mansfield members of the local U. S. Naval Communications Reserve unit are accepting the navy's offer to extend their training through regular cruise duty. Jack Baker is with the Pacific fleet serving as radioman second class on an 11-months' cruise. Howard McAllister will serve two weeks in July on the U. S. S. Wilmette, Great Lakes training fleet flagship, also as radioman second class during squadron maneuvers.

Because a number of men throughout the ninth naval district are on these cruises an opening of enlistments has been announced by E. L. Heck, unit commander, Shelby.

Members of the reserve unit receive training while holding regular employment. Available to them is a fully equipped radio operating and communications room in the basemenut of the Galion post office where physical examinations and enlistments for new recruits will be held after 6 p. m. June 26.

The period of enlistment is for four years and is open to men between the ages of 17 and 35.

Detailed information may be obtained from N. J. Marion, 647 Bowman street, or Howard McAllister, 194 Fairlawn avenue.

THEATERS

Life and Loves of Actresses.

A realistic picture, "Lillian Russell," which is showing at the Ohio, presents the life and loves of the famed actress who for 30 years thrilled theater-goers with her marvelous voice, her masterful acting and her incredible beauty. Featuring Alice Faye in the title role, with Don Ameche, Henry Fonda and Edward Arnold, who plays the role of Diamond Jim Brady, this production is one of musical and dramatic entertainment.

South Sea Magic Displayed.

"Typhoon," which is showing at the Madison, concerns a beautiful castaway who has lived, with only a chimpanzee for company, on an uninhabited island, far from normal sea lanes, and the derelict who lands on her Eden. Technicolor is used to glorify the magical South Sea setting in which Dorothy Lamour and Robert Preston are seen. Preston and Lynne Overman abandon their pearl-hunting submarine and from there on are many complications.

Lloyd Nolan Has Lead.

When you see him on the screen he is nearly always cast as a thug, a heavy, or a "big dumb," yet he is one of the best educated and most cultured actors in Hollywood. An accomplished pianist, Lloyd Nolan is also well versed in literature and can speak several languages fluently. He is seen in "Gangs of Chicago," which is showing at the Park. The co-feature is "Invitation to Happiness," starring Irene Dunne and Fred MacMurray.

Parolee Makes Good.

Starring George Raft, Jane Bryan and William Holden, "Invisible Stripes" is showing at the Ritz. The story is of a man just released from Sing Sing who is determined to lead an honest life but the obstacles he encounters as a parolee make it next to impossible. The co-feature is "Broadway Melody of 1940" with such famous dancers as Eleanor Powell, Fred Astaire, and George Murphy in the leads.

Eternal Triangle.

Beginning Tuesday at the Majestic theater will be "In Name Only," with Carole Lombard, Cary Grant, and Kay Francis leading the cast. How a heartless wife tries to ruin her husband's life solely to maintain her bank account is described in the dramatic story. "Ninotchka," with Melvyn Douglas, Ina Claire and Greta Garbo is the second feature which is a tale of the gay life in Moscow and Paris.

MARKET KEEPS HEAD UP OVER ADVERSE NEWS

War and Political Trends Fail to Frighten Stock Traders.

(By Associated Press)

NEW YORK—The stock market generally kept its head above water today despite adverse war news and indecisive domestic political trends.

Brokers felt the reported German armistice terms accepted by France had been pretty well discounted. Armament spending at home remained the principal bullish argument.

Bonds and commodities were spotty. "Free" sterling moved lower in terms of the dollar.

Among resistant stocks the greater part of the session were U. S. Steel, General Motors, Sears Roebuck, Glenn Martin, Sperry, American Airlines, Du Pont, Allied Chemical, Union Carbide, N. Y. Central, Pennsylvania and American Telephone.

In the matter of armament building as a market prop, trade sources said large contracts are ready for signature at Washington, probably this week.

Boardrooms expressed interest in the survey of the magazine "Steel" which said lifting of pressure for metal shipments to France has permitted mills to give increased attention to domestic business and other export bookings. Orders, it was added, have run ahead of deliveries so far this month.

STATE WPA TO REMOVE NAZIS

COLUMBUS —(U.P.)— Ohio officials of the Works Progress Administration were ready with plans today to remove Nazis, Communists and other "subversive elements" from WPA rolls under the new federal relief law awaiting the signature of President Roosevelt.

Dr. Carl Watson, state administrator, said all WPA workers will be required to sign affidavits disavowing affiliation with any of the organizations mentioned in the law. The penalty for a false statement is two years' imprisonment or a $2,000 fine.

U. S. Aid to Expatriate French Government Studied

LONDON GROUP RECOGNITION SEEN LIKELY

Assets of France in This Country 'Frozen' Until Policy Determined.

By JOSEPH H. BAIRD
(INS Staff Correspondent)

WASHINGTON — The United States, it was indicated today, may be expected to cooperate with any representative French government that successfully continues a prosecution of war against Germany.

Whether this will mean accrediting Ambassador William C. Bullitt to the French national committee being set up in London, officials at this early stage, were unable to say. Nor would the French embassy predict its future allegiance —whether to the Bordeaux government, now completely dominated by Germany, or to the London group.

President Roosevelt and Secretary of State Hull, meanwhile, were confronted with one of the most delicate diplomatic problems in history.

Not only the question of recognition, but the fate of more than $1,250,000,000 in French credits and gold in this country must be decided.

The administration, for the present, has "frozen" these assets. They can not be touched, even by the French ambassador here, Rene De St. Quentin, without a written order from the treasury department. This step was taken to prevent the possibility of their passing to Germany by way of a subservient French government.

It is expected that if the French committee in London is able to mobilize the support and resources of Frenchmen abroad, and, with the aid of the French colonies, carry on the war, the funds held in this country may be released to it.

If not, they probably will continue to be held in custody, at least until the end of the war. The administration was described loath to release them to any government or group which might permit their passsing into the hands of the Germans.

There is ample precedent, observers pointed out, for American diplomatic recognition of a French government functioning on British soil. After the German occupation of Warsaw the United States continued to accredit Ambassador Anthony J. Drexel Biddle to a Polish government functioning in France. Due to the German occupation, the fate of this Polish government is now in doubt.

Washington officials were not particularly surprised at the severity of the German armistice terms. It had been anticipated that if the French were forced to surrender, they would be treated, at least for the duration of the war between Germany and Great Britain, as a conquered people—policed by a German army to make sure that they contributed no further aid to the British.

Meanwhile, preparations are being rushed for the convening of a Pan-American conference. All governments of the western hemisphere have agreed that an immediate meeting to discuss the effects of the war on the Americas is necessary. The date and place of the conference probably will be announced within the next few days.

Eloping Couple Lose Ring And Money on Trip

NEWPORT, Ky. —(U.P.)— Newly-married Mr. and Mrs. Darwood Staples of Cleveland were still wondering today what happened to the ring and money the bridegroom had set aside for the wedding.

MAYOR CALLS COUNCIL FOR MEET TUESDAY

Takes Action to Clear Flood of Legislation Before July Meeting.

To clear council's legislative hopper of a flood of business before the regular July meeting, Mayor William J. Locke today issued a call for a special meeting of city council Tuesday night.

With a heavy docket of miscellaneous business in sight, Locke instructed Council Clerk William J. Beer, jr., to call the legislators into session at 8 p. m.

Two major issues facing council, approval of the 1941 municipal budget and the proposal calling for the installation of parking meters in the business district, are scheduled to be sidetracked until the regular meeting.

The city budget must be held over until July 2 for a public hearing.

The parking meter proposal, scheduled for a second reading is expected to be shelved until the regular meeting. Arthur L. Croak, sponsoring the bill wanted to give the measure consideration so the bill could be passed upon in another week.

George Berg, chairman of the street committee, said however, that the legislation would not be acted on Tuesday night.

"We're not going to pass an important measure like that all in one month," he asserted.

The measure was given its first reading May 7 and will come up for a vote on the third reading.

Chief measure to be acted upon will be an appropriation of $2,000 from the sanitary sewer fund to provide additional funds for hiring additional workers in the sewer maintenance department.

The men are to be added during the summer months to carry out a sewer cleaning program, Service-Safety Director C. M. Crafton said.

Another measure calls for approval of preliminary legislation authorizing construction of an extension in the sanitary sewer system on Park avenue west from Linden road and on Glenbeck lane.

Bike Tag Funds Due.

Approval of a $100 appropriation to cover the purchase of 1,000 bicycle licenses is also expected. The new bicycle license law, passed last month, went into effect this week, but the tags have not yet been purchased.

In addition, council will change the name of four streets. They include an alley to be named Micah place, Hemlock alley to Hemlock avenue, Monroe street to Auburn avenue, and Burns street to Parnell drive.

On file are also numerous petitions and claims including a $400 damage claim received from Atty. H. H. Schettler, former city solicitor, who claims the sanitary sewage had backed up in the basement of his home at 139 Glenwood boulevard for the past two years, damaging basement walls, floor and supports and household equipment.

JAPAN PROTESTS ARMS TRAFFIC

Demands Right to Station Inspectors to Enforce Ban.

TOKYO—(AP)—Japan today protested to Great Britain against the arms traffic to China by way of Burma and demanded the right to station inspectors to enforce a ban on the flow.

Announcement of the protest followed reports in circles close to the government that Japan was planning to take a 'stronger hand,' if not direct action, in regard to British and French possessions in the southern Orient.

Japan has protested repeatedly to France against the alleged transportation of war materials through French Indo-China to China. French Indo-China, Burma and Soviet Russia have been the main channels by which the Chungking government has received supplies.

Demonstrations Made at Meeting Of Sunny Sewers

Demonstrations and talks were given at a recent meeting of the Sunny Sewers 4-H club of East Mansfield at the East Mansfield school.

Mildred Stenstrom, a club member, gave a talk on "Social Customs" and Dorothy Briggs, another member, talked on "Healthful Food and Nutrition."

Haldyene Spriggins and Jo Ann Morrow gave a team demonstration on "Hair Styles," while Louise Briggs gave an individual demonstration on "How to Launder Silk Stockings and Woolens."

The club will meet at the home of Mrs. Grace Morrow, the adviser, at 2:30 p. m. Thursday and then will go to Liberty park for a picnic and a business meeting.

COUNTY KEEPS LEADERSHIP IN 17TH DISTRICT

Richland Still Largest of Six in Congressional Alignment.

Richland county has retained its standing as the largest of the six counties in the 17th congressional district, preliminary reports on the 16th decennial census disclosed today.

Although each of the six counties showed a population gain, Don H. Harper, district census director at Mt. Vernon, said Richland topped the list with a lead of more than 11,000 over the next largest county.

Preliminary figures released by Harper showed that Richland county with a total population of 73,643, held a substantial lead of 11,502 over Licking county with a population of 62,141 persons.

Total population of the 17th congressional district, the figures showed, was 253,971 as compared with 237,061 in 1930. This is a seven per cent gain, Harper said, as compared with a national increase of 6.5 per cent shown to date.

Other four counties in the district and their population was: Knox, 30,932; Coshocton, 30,566; Ashland, 29,956; Delaware, 26,733.

Harper pointed out that for political purposes Richland county will remain as the district election headquarters for the next 10 years, since district election returns are compiled by the largest county in the congressional district.

STOP WILLKIE MOVE GAINING AT CONVENTION

Taft Claims New Strength as Republicans Open Session Today.

the G. O. P. convention "name a man whose personal views and public statements are such that he can run effectively on a platform in harmony with the Republican record in congress."

Behind the effort to organize a united stop-Willkie front was seen the hand of old-line Republican stalwarts who were worried over Willkie's recent switch from the Democratic side to the Republican camp, his utilities connection and the similarity of his foreign policy views to those of President Roosevelt.

Rep. George H. Bender, of Ohio, was among the leaders of the anti-Willkie group.

The other candidates were stiffening their lines in an effort to beat-off Willkie raids on their delegate strength

Taft headquarters issued a statement claiming that the Ohio senator had gained "material strength" in the last two days and that he was still forging ahead

They claimed a hand in the meeting of representatives of 13 northwest states which yesterday adopted a declaration against reciprocal trade treaties or intervention of the United States in Europe or Asia Willkie is on record in favor of reciprocal trade policies and is regarded as leaning closer toward intervention than any other G O P candidate.

The initial session of the convention lasted 47 minutes Then adjournment was taken for resumption of the hotel room and lobby gatherings

With no candidate as yet close to the 501-majority votes the fears of leaders that the convention will deadlock and bolt to a dark horse persisted.

Willkie's spectacular wind-up campaign cracked the favorite son front and today his raiders were poaching in the preserves of every other candidate Former President Herbert C Hoover's cautious presidential boom sounded lounder as delegates milled in convention hall aisles Word came from Nebraska that its 14 votes were likely to bolt District Attorney Thomas E Dewey to Hoover after the first ballot Willkie was said to be the state's choice after Mr Hoover

But Dewey remained top man in practically every poll He is expected to lead the pack on ballot No 1.

This convention will adopt a platform—already almost written—and name a presidential ticket to conduct campaign No 3 against Franklin Delano Roosevelt's New Deal democracy. But it is a wedding without a groom so far

None of nearly a dozen Republican candidates has a majority following now. Some veteran leaders are jittery with fear that these 2,000 or so delegates and alternates will snarl themselves in deadlock.

Willkie, a one-time Democrat might crash through under such circumstances But there are veterans who fear that he would prove a vulnerable politically intractable and defeated candidate by election time next November.

They are talking here of Sen Taft, who is cut to the pattern of G O P tradition

The big hall buzzed with talk of trade but the leaders have made no progress yet toward a deal either to stop or to name a candidate

Sen Charles Tobey (N H) was fuming about the proposed plan outlining the party's stand on war and foreign affairs

He declared that he and Sen Henry Cabot Lodge jr of Massachusetts tried to present their protests to the subcommittee on foreign affairs

"If that plank looks like what I've read in the newspapers," Tobey said, "we might as well go home. It doesn't say a thing that the American people want to hear. It has a foot in one camp and the other foot in another."

Ohio Delegates Stick To Taft.

PHILADELPHIA —(AP)— Ohio delegates to the Republican National convention assembled here today for an organization meeting with no hint of any shift from support of Sen Robert A Taft to Wendell Willkie

Gov John W Bricker was slated to be named chairman of the Ohio delegation Selection of national committeeman and woman was expected to be deferred until after a presidential nominee has been chosen

Willkie's claim that he will "develop great strength from Ohio when that delegation leaves Taft" drew denials from Bricker and Ed Schorr, state party chairman.

Bricker said "no delegate from Ohio has even hinted he would leave Taft. The Ohio delegates will stick to Taft right to the end."

Schorr said "our delegation confidently expects Taft will be nominated, they are not thinking of switching"

Move Fire-Periled Goods

Scenes such as this were commonplace in Mifflin this morning as families huddled in groups with their household goods and surveyed the damage by a fire that routed the entire community from their homes In the center is shown one of the scores of persons who carried water in buckets to aid firemen who battled to save their homes This one shows the residence of Harold Kazbee with part of the family's belongings outside the house

when the circuits were shorted by the fire

When she had completed her calls she related how she had worked for more than an hour in the intense heat and smoke that filtered through the windows

'I was awakened by the cry of 'fire' she related modestly as she brushed back a grey curl from her perspiring forehead

"I smelled smoke and saw the reflection from the blaze I knew it was something serious"

Miss Bell said she immediately wakened her father and mother who live with her, and hurried to her board

"I could see then that the whole corner block was on fire and that unless something was done right away it would spread through the town"

Coolly she stuck to her post as she summoned volunteers and called Mansfield Ashland Perrysville and Hayesville fire departments for assistance

Miss Bell has operated the Mifflin telephone exchange for the past 16 years and it was her first major disaster

stagecoach stop on the Wooster-Mansfield road a restaurant owned by Clarence Schweyer was razed

Mr and Mrs J Ziegler and Mr and Mrs M Wiening and their son Richard 6, who occupied the apartment above the establishment were routed and all their household goods were destroyed

The residence of Burlyn Staman just east of the tavern was also levelled and the home of Marshal Whitcomb partially destroyed.

Miss Willa Dow, proprietor of the Inn was asleep in her apartment on the second floor of the building She was roused by employes and fled None of her personal belongings could be taken from the flaming structure.

The inn, the marshall said, was unoccupied at the time except for three employes and members of the orchestra, all of whom fled to safety

He said one of the employes told of seeing a flash in a rear room of the kitchen He went to investigate and saw a second flash His story led the marshal to believe that spontaneous combustion had caused the fire

Although the employes emptied the contents of a fire extinguisher on the fire it spread rapidly through the kitchen

Whitcomb said he had just retired for the night when he heard someone shout "Fire!"

"I looked out of the window and the whole back of the kitchen was blazing. I ran down and entered the front of the place but it was so filled with smoke by that time that I couldn't see a thing," he related.

Mr. and Mrs Staman and Mr. and Mrs Ziegler and Mrs Wiening all said they were aroused by the same shout All said the flames spread so quickly that they hadn't time to save any of their household goods

Mr and Mrs Harold Kazbee and their three children, who reside at the rear of the inn were roused by the fire and carried their household goods outside as the flames whipped close to the residence blistering the paint of the frame structure

Water was carried in every conceivable container as the town folk hoisted ladders to the roofs and wetted the sides and roofs of the houses to keep them from catching fire.

Heroine of the blaze was Miss Bess M Cole telephone operator who stuck to her post at the switchboard in her residence across the road from the fire and while the heat and smoke rolled in the windows summoning volunteers from the surrounding territory

Utility crews from Mansfield were summoned and cut the power service leaving the town in darkness Gas company workmen shut off their lines

ONLY $2.00 A MONTH

Remove the cause of most of your plumbing troubles, and repairs become unnecessary. Scale, caused by the minerals in hard water, forms on the inside of pipes and water heater coils. In heater coils, the scale acts as heat insulation, requiring more gas to heat the water. Soft Water Service prevents the formation of scale

SAVE plumbing and heating expense caused by scale, by installing SOFT WATER SERVICE.

Clogging of drains is traced directly to hard water. Soap curds formed by the action of minerals on soap, cause the sticky scum which fills the drainpipes, making necessary the use of solvents and, eventually, plumbing repairs. With Soft Water Service, soap curds cannot form, and your troubles from that cause are ended

MANSFIELD, OHIO, MONDAY, JUNE 24, 1940.

Wars are not won with blueprints.

It appears that there's an accumulation of scum in the Melting Pot.

Mussolini is showing more interest in a piece of France than in the peace of Europe.

Defense financing has the advantage of following an earlier build-up of the idea that a billion dollars is a mere bagatelle.

Make Ready for Higher Taxes

HIGHER TAXES, to meet a part of the costs of the defense program upon which the United States is entering, were to be expected, and will come very quickly.

Congress has just passed a new tax bill which will reach directly into the purses of millions of people and which will also add materially to the number required to pay income taxes.

Experience has shown that while Americans are ordinarily reluctant taxpayers, they respond to the call for war or defense taxes more readily than any others.

Occurrences of recent weeks in Europe, with France now beaten into submission and Great Britain forced to carry on the war alone, have served to awaken Americans to the potential dangers of their own situation and to a realization that minor sacrifices now are much to be preferred to the infinitely greater ones that might have to be made later unless adequate defenses are provided.

As new taxes are being levied, however, and as plans go forward to spend billions of dollars for defense, it seems reasonable to ask that the expenditure of this money be placed in competent hands, so that it may be intelligently used for intended purposes rather than frittered away in the reckless manner that other billions have been wasted in recent years.

'Compulsory' Is Unpopular Word

THAT word "compulsory," as used in connection with military training, or in any other way, is as repugnant to millions of people in the United States as any word in the English language.

They like to think, and they have been given cause to think, that their personal liberties are unlimited and that, under no circumstances, should they be "compelled" to do anything that is out of accord with their own desires or inclinations.

This trait is evidenced by many so-called "good citizens," as well as by recognizedly bad ones, in their persistent infraction of parking regulations and other traffic laws intended for public safety or convenience.

Nor can it be doubted that some habitual criminals, even the most vicious types, find justification for their acts in their own distorted minds, and regard arrest and punishment as an unwarranted infringement on their personal liberty.

Whatever may have been regarded as an earlier requirement for parental or school discipline has been largely abandoned within the past several decades and encouragement given to a beautiful but impractical theory of juvenile "self expression," which has already played havoc with the lives of many young people who might otherwise have made a valuable contribution to their generation.

Now the problem becomes a larger one than that of family, community or state. It becomes a matter of what can be done by an undisciplined and unprepared nation to protect itself against forces which, even yet, many people do not recognize as a threat to national and individual life and liberty.

The desire for continued peace is widespread in the United States—and is as natural here as among civilized people all over the world. But the desire for peace gives no assurance that it can be maintained—as was discovered in peace-loving China, and more recently, by people of small independent nations of Europe and by unfortunate millions who have been made refugees by the sweep of war through their homelands.

While Hitlerized Germany was devoting years to building up a mighty fighting force of men and machines, and feeding its people on the doctrine of hate, France, Great Britain and the United States were turning their talents to the pursuits of peace and disregarding a war threat that was at all times awaiting the moment to strike.

No better summary of causes of France's present plight can be found than was contained in the pathetic utterance of the aged Premier Henri Petain: "Too few soldiers, too few arms, too few allies."

After which this heart-broken hero of the first World war arraigned his own nation in these words: "Since the (World War) victory the spirit of pleasure has prevailed over the spirit of sacrifice. The people have demanded more than they have given. They wished to spare themselves effort. Today misfortune has come."

There should be no "war party" in the United States—and there should be no "peace party." There should be realistic approach to problems that are being forced upon a peaceful nation by the totalitarian butchery now going on in Europe and unified efforts made to prevent its encroachment on American shores.

Famine Threatens Europe

REPORTS from continental Europe express fear of widespread famine next winter. Russia is known to be very short of foodstuffs. But the biggest calamity is expected to befall western Europe as a direct result of the Nazi war operations and annexations.

The great thrust to the north and west, with the seizure of the western democracies, was not only a territorial grab but a looting operation. There were plenty of food supplies in Norway, Denmark, Holland, Belgium and France, just as there had been in Poland and Czechoslovakia before the Nazis took them over. But the surplus stores were largely confiscated for the use of the German army and nation. The Nazi army, of course, has first access to such stores. But all Germany, however poorly the civilians may be faring, is said to be living largely on the loot of these military seizures and annexations.

The conquerors' claims are naturally put first. Thus vast quantities of food have been drained from the annexed countries, at the same time that their business and industry have been ruined, their export trade cut off and their normal agriculture interfered with.

North and South America will be expected to provide the food to keep those ruined populations alive next winter. And they will doubtless be generous. But they will bitterly resent this indirect contribution to the Nazi war machine.

Watching Trends

—By JACK STINNETT

WASHINGTON—The foundation of a new Monroe Doctrine is buried in a simple but amazing joint resolution which went before Congress with almost incredible speed.

It is simple because, on the surface, it says so little and really is not binding at all. It is amazing because, in its deep-rooted implications, it gives the President the green light to wield "the big stick" in a sphere the size of which President Monroe never dreamed.

The resolution is simply this declaration of foreign policy: "That the United States would not recognize any transfer, and would not acquiesce in any attempt to transfer, ANY GEOGRAPHIC REGION OF THE WESTERN HEMISPHERE from one non-American power to another non-American power." (There's another paragraph about consulting with other American republics in event any such transfer seems imminent, but that's really not very important.)

That's all there is to it. A simple statement, if there ever was one. Those capital letters are mine. In that phrase, "any geographic region of the western hemisphere," lies the subtlety and dynamite of what may be one of the most important legislative acts of this and many another Congress.

West of What?

IT'S no laughing matter, but there's one big laugh in it. Any second-rate map-maker can tell you that no one yet has been able to divide the eastern and western hemispheres to the satisfaction of all concerned. As S. W. Boggs, state department geographer and a scholar of international repute, puts it, "This question at once arises, east or west of what?"

Most map-makers now, merely as a matter of convenience, start with the 20th meridian west of Greenwich, England, as the eastern boundary of the western hemisphere, and extend it 180 degrees west to the 160th meridian east of Greenwich. If that's what Congress means by this extension of the Monroe Doctrine, get out your maps and get ready for a gasp. Because that includes the Azores on the east, practically all of Greenland, a third of Iceland—and on the west, Tahiti, New Zealand, and more pinpoints of land in the South Pacific than you could shake a stick at. There's even a sizable hunk of Russia, beyond the Bering Straits, in this area.

But Congress, in its resolution, doesn't say that those are the limits of the western hemisphere. Congresswoman Edith Nourse Rogers, of Massachusetts, asked Mr. Boggs to define the western hemisphere, and Mr. Boggs, after long explanations of why it could not be done, said that "it seems better to regard this hemisphere" as extending from the 20th meridian (that includes the Azores, mind you, but Mr. Boggs did not mention inclusion of any portion of Iceland, though he did include Greenland) to the International Date Line, which roughly runs along the 180th meridian, but bulges east to miss New Zealand and Russia and west to include the westernmost of the Aleutian islands.

It does include Tahiti, which belongs to France. It also includes so many other French and British islands that a list of them in smallest type would take up more space than this column fills. It doesn't include Wake, Guam and the Philippines and it doesn't include the Dutch West Indies, richest of all the Pacific prizes, but the Philippines are still ours until 1946 and Secretary Hull already has notified the world that the Monroe Doctrine goes for the Dutch West Indies.

Canada Put In Recently.

SOMEBODY'S bound to stand up and say "Well, the original Monroe Doctrine (it was nothing more than a message to congress) mentioned the 'western hemisphere's twice." It's true. But President Monroe and his cabinet were thinking only of the United States, Central and South America. Why, even Canada was so far out of it that when President Roosevelt only recently announced extension of the doctrine to our neighbor to the north, it was news.

It's not for me to discuss the merits or demerits of this sweeping declaration of foreign policy. There being no definition of western hemisphere in it, it could be tossed away as a bit of legislative idling, anyway. But put it in your pipe that this measure is not idling. If you doubt its far-reaching implications, ask yourself: What happens if some power unfriendly to the United States takes over Portugal and the Azores? What happens if Germany demands those thousand-and-one little stepping stones to the Orient in the Pacific?

GOP May Fumble Defense Issue

—By CARTER FIELD

WASHINGTON — Indications multiply that the Republicans are going to tear themselves to pieces over the international situation.

Ironically enough, it was the national defense situation which made President Roosevelt's administration vulnerable. Until the disclosure that even the administration admitted this country was woefully unprepared, despite the expenditure of seven billion dollars for defense since 1933, most political observers, whatever they might say publicly, admitted privately that nothing could stop Roosevelt's re-election.

The administration is now vulnerable from two angles. One is that it has been too belligerent in its effort to aid the Allies, both in provocative words and deeds. The other is that it has been terribly inefficient in preparing for national defense.

PUT together, the two would seem to present quite a target, but the difficulty of putting the two together is that to do so might easily drive a very large number of persons who, however critical they may be of the waste and inefficiency and lack of foresight of the administration so far as national defense is concerned, are so rampantly pro-Ally that they would support Roosevelt in spite of other objections, if the Republican candidate and platform seem to them to play Hitler's game.

If some super boss could only muzzle the G. O. P. convention on isolation, and the Republicans could concentrate their fire on inefficiency, making the appeal that the New Dealers have proved their incompetence and that it requires a Republican administration to insure that this country shall be properly prepared for defense, Roosevelt MIGHT be beaten.

But this is highly unlikely. The trouble is that too many individual Republicans, including some of the candidates, are trying to make capital of the issue, "Roosevelt will lead us into war." Not satisfied with that, they are sniping at details, which are vital to aiding the Allies, and for that reason apt to antagonize the tremendously large segment of the electorate in this country which wants above everything else to aid the Allies in their fight against Hitler.

It should be noted here that in this very large group are not merely the men and women who naturally sympathize with the Allies. They are augumented heavily by a group which might not like either Britain or France very much, but believes that every blow struck at the Nazis NOW helps just that much to keep America's path clear.

This latter contingent fears that if Hitler wins too easily over Britain—as easily he has over France—our zero hour is thereby drawn that much closer. Not only that, they believe that if Germany and Italy are sufficiently exhausted in the present struggle, the whole world picture may change before this country is seriously endangered.

TAKE the matter of the twenty small torpedo boats. As the White House explained these little ships were constructed from British blueprints. They are equipped with 18-inch torpedo tubes. Our navy uses 21-inch torpedo tubes and does not have one 18-inch torpedo! One may ask WHY they were so constructed. If the Republicans had been content to make THAT particular attack, it might have been difficult for the administration to make a satisfactory answer PUBLICLY.

Everybody who wants to do everything possible for the Allies would have been all for their construction just as they were. But the administration might not like to make that particular defense.

But to attack the turning of them over to Britain just isn't good politics. It will not affect the transaction, because the boats WILL be turned over. The tremendous majority of 67 to 18 for the subterfuge of "trading in" old planes on new ones is a guarantee of that. The torpedo-boat incident is a piece of the same cloth as the airplane device, so heavily approved. So that the only result of the attack is to drive a certain number of New Deal critics into Roosevelt's arms.

Health and Diet

Several Questions Answered Here.

—By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

A patient writes "I have been told that my sciatica is due to a protruded intervertebral disk. Will you please explain what this means?"

The backbone is composed of a series of superimposed separate bones. Between each one is a cartilaginous disk called the "intervertebral disk." Recent studies have indicated that in certain cases low back pain and sciatica may be due to dislocation of this cartilaginous disk. The condition is known as "protruded intervertebral disk."

A considerable difference of opinion has been expressed as to how often it occurs. Probably a very low percentage—not more than 2 per cent of all cases of low back pain. Such cases of sciatica or low back pain as are caused by this condition are always preceded by injury or accident. Reports say that surgical removal of the disk is followed by relief.

It certainly indicates that whoever made this diagnosis is an alert and up-to-date physician, but it is to be hoped that gossip on this subject will not spread too rapidly among nervous patients. Most cases of low back pain are relieved by manipulations and by rest, warmth, light treatments and diathermy.

What is the best solution to use for the prevention of athlete's foot in shower baths, by the sides of pools, and other such purposes?

A one per cent solution of sodium hypochlorite. Another solution used is calcium hypochlorite in a two per cent solution. This is generally cheaper than sodium hypochlorite but there have been no careful studies on the capacity of calcium hypochlorite to kill ringworm. It is also more irritating to tissues.

Sodium hypochlorite is conveniently purchased in metal chemical carboys in 20 per cent strength. This is diluted twenty to one for placing in footbaths and the solution should be changed every second or third day. The approximate cost per change should be about 10 or 15 cents, depending on the size of the footbath.

A diabetic or a person who is overweight, who uses saccharin regularly asks whether its continued use is accompanied by any harm.

No. This subject has been carefully investigated by a number of workers, and except in extremely large doses, no harmful effect has ever been proved from its use. The average amount of saccharin used is about a half a grain in a cup of coffee, making one and one-half grains a day the average dose. This can be continued for an indefinite period.

There are plenty of diabetic patients who have used saccharin for years and can testify to this fact.

MERRY-GO-ROUND

By DREW PEARSON and ROBERT S. ALLEN

PHILADELPHIA—As the opening curtain rises today at the Republican convention, the real behind-the-scenes race is between two candidates.

One, based on powerful delegate support, is Ohio's earnest, plain-talking Senator Bob Taft.

The other is a tousle-haired, oomphish utility magnate, former Democrat and Roosevelt contributor, who frankly admits he is a dark horse and will have not more than 70 votes on the first ballot—Wendell Willkie.

Young Tom Dewey, whose star sparkled so brilliantly only a few months ago, is all washed up—the victim of two blitzkriegs. One was Hitler's conquest of Europe; the other the purge of Ken Simpson, one-time Dewey pal and New York national committeeman.

The two blows, coming on top of each other, finished Dewey. The first blitzkrieg torpedoed his big public appeal of a dashing young vice crusader. War was far more important. The second cut the ground from under Dewey with party leaders. He didn't play ball with the man who helped make him.

Senator Vandenberg is also out of the running. He never was in it very seriously. But whatever his chances, they vanished when he lost in the Wisconsin and Nebraska primaries. Also, his isolationism is too strongly recorded for campaign purposes.

The other hopefuls have no look-in unless there is a deadlock between Taft and Willkie. That is not likely but still it's not impossible. Should this deadlock ensue, the hopefuls whom the lightning is most likely to strike are: Governor Bricker of Ohio, secret first choice of Pennsylvania boss Joe Pew; Herbert Hoover, who has a considerable following among old-line leaders; and brainy Joe Martin, house floor leader who would have Alf Landon's potent backing.

Taft In Front.

FOR Taft, the crucial test will be the third ballot.

On the first ballot he will lead the field with not less than 350 votes. On the second ballot, he will pick up between 100 and 115. What happens thereafter will decide whether Taft can do what no other son of a president has done since John Quincy Adams became president of the United States.

If Taft can show enough of a gain on the third count to put him within throwing distance of the 501 needed to nominate, he'll be nominated. Should he falter on the third ballot, then he's through.

Willkie's secret strategy is to time his big offensive for this moment. Starting with about 70 votes, he will try on the second ballot to stage a spectacular jump to 200 by raiding Dewey and unpledged delegations. Willkie's undercover support is largely at Dewey's expense.

On the third ballot, Willkie's blitzkrieg time-table calls for a gain proportionately greater than Taft's so as to bring them on approximately even terms. From then on, the plan calls for stampede tactics. Whether he can put on that kind of pressure remains to be seen.

Willkie's chief obstacles are the old-line and congressional leaders. The former fear him as a "reformed New Dealer," the title given him by Joe Pew. The latter consider his utility and Wall Street background to be sure political poison in the West.

Whether the leaders can hold the rank and file delegates in the showdown, is a big question. This convention is one of the most independent in GOP history. Also, it is one of the most earnest. The average delegate is looking for a Messiah; and Willkie, with his free and easy manner, his breezy talk, his slashing New Deal blasts and his spectacularly successful campaign has captured the imaginations of the victory-hungry.

Note—Dewey managers, irate at Willkie's raids on their ranks, privately are planning to throw their weight to Taft when the break comes.

Convention Shorts.

AMONG the celebrities at Philadelphia as guests of the national committee is Mrs. William Howard Taft, widow of the late president and mother of the senator. . . . Herbert Hyde, temporary chairman of the platform committee, has a novel argument for defeating Roosevelt. Says the Oklahoman, "If Great Britain could change horses in the middle of the stream, why can't we change horses in the middle of a dream?" . . . Joe Pew's contribution to the convention's decorations was a huge sign over the auditorium reading, "In this hall the next president of the United States will be nominated." . . . Kenneth Simpson, lame-duck national committeeman from New York, is predicting that the state delegation will break away from Dewey on the second ballot. . . . When Senator Taft shifted his campaign headquarters from Washington to Philadelphia he succeeded in hanging on to his prophetic telephone numerals. (At least he hopes they're prophetic.) His Washington telephone number is Metropolitan 1940; Philadelphia number is Walnut 1940.

Hurley Coup.

Republican leaders were just as surprised as the CIO by John L. Lewis' pro-Hoover declaration. Neither group had any inkling it was coming and labor union ranks were speechless.

CIO headquarters was as gloomy as Paris the day it surrendered. Press efforts to obtain an explanation of the amazing political somersault were met with glum shakes of the head.

Significantly, both GOP and CIO chiefs credit the move to Pat Hurley, dapper secretary of war in the Hoover cabinet and an old friend of Lewis. Several years ago Hurley tried to get him to accept a Hoover offer to become secretary of labor, but John L. turned it down because of Hoover's depression policies—which he now praises. Lewis and Hurley had a secret talk several days before Lewis made his speech.

Note—In CIO circles, Lewis' speech is considered a public declaration of war on Sidney Hillman, leader of the pro-Roosevelt bloc. Lewis was infuriated by Hillman's appointment to the National Defense Committee, considers it a personal affront to him and a move to aid the drive to depose him as CIO president.

Bind Weed

(A FARMER'S DIARY)

—By CALVIN A. BYERS

OF ALL the hundred varieties of weeds for which our garden is the common meeting ground, the most luxuriant is the peavine or bind weed.

When I set out tomato plants I noticed little bright green triangular leaves emerging from the ground. They appeared so innocent that I admired them. After ten days of rainy growing weather they revealed themselves the arch enemies of my vegetables.

Other weeds grow straight and rest their weight upon their stem. Not so this convolvulus. It crawls in serpentine spirals along the ground, its green graceful tip, arrowshaped, rising above the surface of growth to look about for a victim to climb upon. If nothing is there to hold it up, I notice that three or four stalks grow together and twine about each other until they reach high and form a symmetrical bower.

I hoed my tomatoes. About the sturdiest stalks, stealthy peavines, rooted sometimes two feet away, had wrapped themselves and climbed gently until they waved in triumph above the top. I knew these clinging vines would become more wiry as time went on and squeeze the very life blood from their victims, while shading them so that they could not live. My sharp hoe cut the base of the stalks — then I had to carefully unwind the coils, losing some tomato leaves in the rescue. The bind weeds clung about my hoe in a ragged snarl, impeding progress and disturbing my even temper.

I hoed out white fleshy rhizomes of the weed with little eyes where new plants would start. Along the vine long-stemmed leaves grew a few inches apart. Within the axis of some leaves buds had emerged on slender stems. The flowers are morning-glory-like, white, with pink or blue markings. They open at sunup and close about four in the afternoon. The seeds are small, dark and prolific.

When the underground stem is bruised or the top pinched off, a milky sap shows, much like that of the wild cotton family. Farmers often leave fields infested with this pest to meadow grass or pasture, rather than undertake to rid themselves of it.

Yet I am impressed by its admirable qualities, even while I wield my hoe and mop my face. It has persistence, and a power to hold its own. It has virility and several means of propagation. Its wily graceful curves are strong, its flowers are beautiful, and it is ever reaching up to higher things . . . though, like the devil, it has a selfish motive in doing so.

FOREST FURY + + + + + + + + +

CHAPTER VIII

"Sue! . . . Gee! . . . People—girls can be too damned modern!" Rosemary was almost in tears even though she was milling happily, but Sue didn't notice.

"Don't swear, honey. Nice girls don't, out here."

There was a great spreading armchair made of oak limbs with the bark still on, all covered by a sheepskin with the fleece side out. To sit in it was like lying on a feather mattress, so deep-downy soft was the thing. "I'll loaf here shamefully," Rosemary predicted.

There was a rustic table, another rustic chair, a meticulously clean bathroom with no tub but with a good shower, a homemade chest of drawers with forest scenes burned on them with a hot iron, a mirror three feet high, a large closet, and finally a fireplace as high as Rosemary's shoulder.

"I lived on Central Park West, up near One Hundred and First street, but it wasn't as luxurious as this and I had to ride the bus or the subway to work." Rosemary was surveying her new quarters. "You'll come to see me every day until I do find a buyer, won't you, Sue?"

"I hope you never find a buyer. Give us a month and we'll make you feel at home."

"You're sweet. I shall certainly—hello! Listen!"

They heard a call from downstairs and hastened to the window. Below and out front Dr. Archibald Montgomery was leaving his new car. He waved at the girls and called up to them again.

"Hi yo, Monty!" Rosemary hailed him. "Be right down."

They met him in the front of the store, all three beaming happily.

"How do you do, Mr. Importance!" Rosemary began, in mock formality. "Picture all over the papers and everything!"

Monty blushed. "Oh, I say——"

"Hush!" Sue teased. "He loves it, really, Rosemary. Look at him."

They had a moment of laughter, and then a long discussion about the speech plans. In truth, he was very happy about the recognition and it was a pleasure to share the happiness with him. He looked and acted more like an embarrassed but lovable boy than a dignified college professor.

"I am off for an overnight field trip to a cliff dwelling," he informed them. "So I came by your post to outfit myself."

"You'd better!" Rosemary frowned. "If my friends don't trade here—gee!"

"You have many customers? Truly?"

"Monty—I'm surprised. Yes. I do. The strangest assortment, too. Motorists stopping to eat and drink and talk. Lumberjacks. Indians. Cowboys. Rangers. Fishermen. A strange assortment!"

"Um. That's fine. But—ah, I notice that one comes onto your place rather unexpectedly. Now it is true that bold and blatant sign-boards are taboo nowadays, nevertheless intelligent merchandising would suggest that, ah—"

'Oh. I never thought of that, Monty. What would a great one cost? Could it be neon?"

"My dear Rosemary, no!" He was back into his classroom manner. "There is a power line on the highway, but do not make that mistake. Your place, always remember, is a trading post, not a smarte shoppe on Broadway. Keep it in character. Most pitiable is the little country store which tries to install citified fixtures and act like city stores. Keep your post's picturesque appeal."

"Oh."

"Exactly." He was nodding.

"But—Bob said it looked something like a barn, and—"

"I disagree. Even so, however, it has the flavor of the West. The local folk appreciate your loyalty in keeping it so, and the tourists will be delighted to find one place out of the ordinary, one real trading post with the atmosphere and settings of the wild Indian country. You—ah, you yourself should dress in western costume. And the signboard—here, let me have a piece of paper."

In ten minutes he had sketched a proposed outdoor sign for her that held the rustic charm of the store. It was a thing framed in logs. The letters were made of short sticks. The actual words were few, but suggestive.

Both girls were delighted with the sketch and the idea.

"Mon-ty!" breathed Rosemary. "You're a darling!"

She said it as she would have said it to Sue, indeed as she had frequently said it to Sue or any other friend. It was a term of genuine friendliness and respect.

But to Dr. Archibald Montgomery it was a magic word. Darling! . . . Darling! . . . No other girl had ever called him darling; it did things to him.

He glanced at Rosemary pouring over the sketch, noted the pink sweetness of her, the complete daintiness. Then he swallowed, hard. She was undoubtedly the most beautiful girl he had ever known!

The College Outdoor theater was precisely that—a theater under the stars.

In common with all other folk who do not see beauties right at home, the local residents did not fully appreciate the grandeur of the place. Rosemary Taylor, however, was breathless when she and Sue McKee and Bob King walked around the clump of shrubbery that formed the front wall and entered the gently sloping area covered with seats.

The seats were four-foot logs, twelve feet long, from which a quarter section had been sawed to create just the right angle for comfort. The stage was a greensward backed by shrubs and trees in informal mass, above which the near-distant peak of San Francisco mountain loomed in the theatrical brilliance. At night, under this full summer moon, its snow was eerie and strange, like a great silent ghost.

A temporary log platform had been erected on the grass stage because this was merely a speaking occasion, and it was bedecked with electric lights and held a microphone. Loud speakers were concealed in the trees around the theater. By 8 p. m. some 2,000 people were present, and Dr. Lovett was introducing Dr. Montgomery. Rosemary with Sue and Bob had come down to the very second row. Monty saw them and smiled when the girls waved friendly encouragement.

Monty began his address somewhat diffidently, getting through the essential courtesies, and thank-yous. When he suddenly swung into his evening's theme, however, he was instantly a new man. He seemed to take on stature, assurance, poise. His voice was louder, but still cultured. Plainly he was sure of his ground, and enthusiastic.

"It is foolish for the individual to dwell much in his own personal past," he was saying, "but it is also foolish to think that the past of mankind holds nothing of interest and importance. Indeed it is only by a calm survey of what man has done heretofore that we can determine what courses are best now, and what courses are likely to be wise in our future. Archaeology and ancient history are fascinating academically, but they hold an unappreciated practical significance as well. Bear with me briefly while I endeavor to show why this is true."

That approach instantly captured the people gathered there.

Here, surely, was a man of common sense, not just a pedagogue. Well, Dr. Lovett had said so, had said that Dr. Montgomery's distinction rested in the fact that he had humanized the otherwise obstruse study, made it important to the average woman and man. All told, Monty's address was a masterpiece. (Dr. Lovett had wisely ordered it taken down in shorthand, subsequently had it published in a national journal.) Sue and Rosemary and Bob found it fascinating.

Afterward they tried to get near Monty to congratulate him, but Harvey and Mitzi Trott, reporters from a Phoenix daily who were hobbyists in archaeology themselves, had been near Flagstaff and motored over for the lecture. They and others of the audience had Monty surrounded now, answering questions. A week later the Phoenix paper came out with a full Sunday page about Dr. Montgomery and his work, and his photograph and his ideas were carried all over the southwest.

When the two girls and Bob rode back toward the trading post after the lecture, the girls did most of the talking until Rosemary challenged, "Tongue-tied, Bob? You've hardly said a word. Didn't you like Monty?"

"Oh. Oh, sure. There's no denying he's got plenty on the ball. Tops in his own field."

Bob said it rather formally. He discussed it no further, and yet Rosemary sensed that the matter had better be dropped. She and Sue were with Bob King tonight, and even though it was technically Monty Montgomery's night to shine, it wouldn't be tactful to praise Monty much now. Human nature is just what it is.

Nevertheless, her mind was active. Tops in his own field. Bob had admitted that. But—had it been said as a reservation? In his own field.

* * *

Of course Bob would not be guilty of making sly comparisons or dirty digs, she felt. True there was the memory of the saddle horse; Monty didn't even know about using a blanket. Monty hadn't been able to start a stalled car, either. Both men tricks. Bob's fingernails were always dirty—Rosemary glanced at them even now, and verified it—while Monty's never were. Bob's hands were callouses; Monty's never did. But callouses can imply masculinity, strength.

"Oh the moon is blazing over the mountain,
The stars are sparks from a
fiery fountain,
Swing high—
Swing low—
Swing your horse to your sweetheart's ho-o-o-ome."

Sue broke into a currently popular western song, her throaty contralto sounding lovely in the night. Rosemary picked up the melody, humming when she couldn't remember the words. The car was rolling smoothly. It was fun thus to sing and ride.

That's about all that was needed to break through Bob King's reserve. Music often can do what words can't, in molding a mood. Without further invitation he picked up the next song himself:

"Arizona maidens,
Beautiful and gay,
Hold a welcome for you
When you want to pla-a-ay.
Leave your cares behind you,
Love is here to stay,
Boys and girls are laughing—
Can't you hear them say,
Viva la fiesta-a-a-!"

It was a more dramatic piece than the other song. It got off to a soft lyrical start, built up rapidly, and then gave Bob a chance to roar out in powerful baritone. In short, it was ideal for a happy boyish fellow who enjoyed showing off a little.

"Bravo!" Sue applauded. "You oughta to be in pictures, Bob. But listen—I've got to duck the party. Can't you swing me by home before you drop Rosemary?"

Mr. McKee, forest supervisor for this district, had a home in the forest itself, not six miles from Rosemary's trading post. A short side road led to it and Bob obediently took the turn.

"Dad wants me to ride out with him at four a. m. and I agreed to pack our bags tonight. It's already a little late." Sue's explanation was accepted easily. The three chatted a moment by the car in front of her home, then said good night.

When they had gone a couple of miles, the car ended a long pulling drive and topped a noticeable rise. There was a sign:

SUMMIT
Alt. 8,400

The altitude and the air made the night crisp regardless of summer, but the view from this mountaintop was so breath-taking that Bob automatically slowed down.

O-o-o-o-oh!" Rosemary murmured in awe, under her breath, staring.

Away to the westward was a moon-bathed sea of mountains, lesser mountains under them, stretching off for at least sixty or seventy miles. Above the horizon cumulus clouds were snowy against the black sky, the full moon spotting them and illuminating their edges in fantasmic array.

Bob edged off the road, stopping the car, then the motor itself.

"Magnifico!" he muttered in turn.

"As if all the universe were before us, Bob," Rosemary almost whispered. "And the silence — there's not even a breeze. Let's walk out to the rock rim there, will you?"

They moved to the edge of a precipice, near a stone as big as a huge log. They were a hundred yards from the highway now, and down a little way. But this position gave them an even grander view, a panorama right and left that seemed to stretch into eternity itself.

When they had just stared for a long long while, Rosemary spoke again.

"Bob, please sing again, softly. You have a lovely voice."

He hesitated a bit, then started:

"Moonlight is beaming
And starlight is gleaming,
I'm dreaming of you, my
chiquita.
Ta tum, tum tum—won't you
sing it with me,
Rosemary?"

"I don't know it, Bob. But it's beautiful."

"It's an old song—'Cielito Lindo —Beautiful Heaven.' It's Spanish. The Mexicans all love it. I know the Spanish words, too."

He sang it in Spanish then. When he came to the chorus—"Ay, ay, ay-ay, canta y no llores —" he had lifted his handsome head and was singing with genuine feeling, gazing off into the far night.

He had lifted Rosemary up on the rock so that she sat at about the height of his shoulder, and now he stood near as if he were serenading her, which in truth he was.

No More Waking Up Mornings Feeling Achy, Tired & Dizzy

Pennsylvania Railroad Telegraph Operator Feels Like Different Person Since Vendol Relieved Constipation. Advises Everyone to Try Famous Medicine.

MR. EDMOND S. GRAY

"I was a victim of constipation which caused no end of other troubles, not the least of which was starting the day by awakening with a headache, feeling dizzy, tired, achy, tongue coated, horrible taste in my mouth, and the sight of food almost nauseated me; then what little I ate disagreed with my stomach causing sourness, gas, 'heartburn,' acid risings, and feeling like I had a lump in my throat," says Mr. Edmond S. Gray of 462 North Mulberry street, Mansfield, who is formerly of Newcomerstown, where he is widely acquainted.

"Hearing so much praise for Vendol, I got some and a box of Vendol laxative tablets, and I never tried any other medicine that promoted such smooth, natural complete bowel movements, and now there is no waking up with all those awful feelings, but instead I roll out feeling grand and ready for my day's work; then at night I enjoy restful sleep. It's a great experience to find relief like this and I'm thankful to Vendol for all of it, and hope many people suffering like I did will give it a chance to help them, too."

That is what just one well known citizen living here at home says about Vendol, but all around town and nearby vicinity you'll find ministers, merchants, farmers, school teachers, railroad men, mechanics, and their wives, sons and daughters, taking Vendol and getting the same grand relief. So, if you suffer like this, give Vendol a chance to help you, too.

Come to Central Drug Store, corner Main and 4th Streets, and learn all the facts about Vendol without obligation. All leading druggists sell this popular medicine.

TWO SISTERS ATTEND SUZANNE YANOSCHEK

Mansfield Girl Becomes Bride of Anton Reiser In Formal Service Performed At St. Peter's Catholic Church.

ANOTHER marriage of Saturday was that of Miss Suzanne Yanoschek, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Yanoschek, 292 Third avenue, and Anton Reiser, jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Anton Reiser, R. D. 2. The ceremony was read by Rev. M. A. Vogel at 8 a. m. before the altar of St. Peter's Catholic church. Raymond Baum played the nuptial mass music.

Miss Yanoschek came up the aisle on the arm of her father attired in a starched marquisette gown made with a full skirt and train. Chantilly lace trimmed the neckline and waist of the pure white gown. With this the bride carried a bouquet of white roses, gardenias and lilies-of-the-valley made in the semi-colonial style. Her circular virgin veil was attached to a headpiece of pearls.

The bride's two sisters, Miss Catherine and Miss Elizabeth, served as maid of honor and bride's maid, respectively. The maid of honor was attired in a blue starched marquisette gown made with a squared neckline, drindl skirt and puffed sleeves. The edge of the skirt was trimmed with deep flounces of Chantilly lace which matched that used on the bride's gown. Miss Elizabeth was attired in a gown of pink made exactly like the maid of honor's. Both wore slippers in a contrasting shade, and small flower hats with long ribbon streamers and bows in the back. They carried semi-colonial bouquets of roses and larkspur.

Nick Loris was best man, and Robert Horvath served as groomsman, while Carl Stehle and Matthias Fisher served as ushers.

At noon a wedding dinner was served to 50 friends and relatives at the Sons of Herman hall. A three tiered wedding cake was used as the decoration of the table. Later the couple left for a week's wedding trip to Washington, D. C., and New York City. They will be at home on R. D. 2 after July 1.

The bride, who has been employed at the Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing company, attended St. Peter's school, while Mr. Reiser, who also works at Westinghouse, attended the Madison high school.

Out-of-town guests were Mr. and Mrs. Steven Yanoschek, Mr. and Mrs. George Luffy, St. Louis, Mo., Mr. and Mrs. Henry Carriene, and Mrs. Mary Shampier, Detroit, Mich.

Informally Speaking...

June 24, 1940.

Lucy, dear:

AND still it continues to rain. I guess we've come to expect rainy days as the natural course of weather and thus be more than pleased when we have a sunny one. It seems the only nice feature of the whole thing is that there's no necessity for standing hours at a time sprinkling the lawn and flower beds these summer evenings.
